SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1905.

Granite City Club Banquet.

The members of the Granite City Club in the Savings Bank building were entertained Tuesday evening. The bright, welcoming light that usually shines from its windows was missing. The reason for this unusual state of affairs was that the club members were out of town on pleasure bent.

Once a year the club members like themselves to Boston town, and after regaling themselves with things good to eat and drink, they return to their duties on Monday morning.

The United States Hotel was the headquarters of the army gathered for the feast and the majestic theatre for the after part.

It was announced that dinner would be served at 6.30, and at that hour a goodly number had assembled in one of the parlors awaiting the signal to go to the dining room. The signal came a few minutes before 6 o'clock, and it was not long before the seats at the long table were occupied.

President Jones occupied the seat of honor at the head of the table, while at his left side sat Vice President Curtis, and on his right the watchdog of the house committee. In one corner of the large dining hall was Monk's orchestra.

George Monk knew just the kind of music the boys liked, and all the popular songs of the day were rendered. So catchy was the music that there was hardly a selection in which the musical voices of the club's vocalists were not heard. The second page of the menu card enumerated some of the selections played which were dedicated to well known members.

Between the courses President Jones read letters and telegrams from absent members—President Roosevelt, Rockefeller and others. These were bristling with wit and replete with knocks that hit the mark.

The applause that greeted the reading of these effusions showed only too well how near the mark their authors had come. It was nearly 7.30 when the after dinner coffee had been taken and the cigars passed.

The members then headed for the majestic theatre, and when the curtain rose for the opening act of "The Philosopher" the three front rows of the orchestra were filled with good looking gentlemen at which more than one pair of opera glasses in the hands of the fair sex was trained during the evening.

Each row on the stage of his coat a fragrant pink, and although now and then a shining bald head could be seen they were on the whole a fine looking body of men who did credit to the city.

The tuxedo opera was greatly enjoyed, and the sweet musical voices of the soloist brought forth rounds of applause.

Some one had put the comedian and other actors wise, and now and then reference was made to some of the gentlemen in the three front rows. Everybody in these seats immediately caught on and there was a general clapping of hands.

All good things come to an end some time, and so did the opera. Some of those who hurried were in time for the 10.50 train. Others came home on the 11.27 upon which a car had been reserved for their use.

As a whole the evening proved most enjoyable one, and thanks are due to the entertainment committee, consisting of Ernest L. Saunders, Charles H. Pennington and Walter C. McConnaughy, for the successful manner in which the program was arranged and carried out.

A District Nurse.
Those who are conversant with the needs of Quincy, in regard to the care of the sick in our midst who are greatly reduced in circumstances, or even people of moderate means, will agree that it is high time that some effort be made to organize a movement to secure the services of a district nurse. In all cities that employ such nurses, the testimony is that no one can realize their usefulness until such nurses are employed.

Investigation has proved that the expense of securing such help is about $600 a year, not including medicine or needed articles, as the nurse makes her rounds day by day. All the visits should be made under the direction of a physician, and those who are unable to pay for such services should be aided by the generosity of the public.

Many families are able to pay a small sum for ministrations, perhaps some varying from twenty-five to fifty cents a visit. Such payments are added to the general fund, and thus reduce the amount of donations needed. Many lives would be saved if in the hour of sudden illness a nurse was promptly on hand to render efficient aid.

The upon who frequently has to resume her household duties too soon, would be aided by having proper care for herself and babe. She would have many little things given to comfort and strengthen her, and thus perhaps her life prolonged.

Spotted Fever in Quincy.
Two cases of cerebro-spinal meningitis have been reported to the Board of Health this week. One was a fatal case Thursday morning. The first case was that of James Hickey, aged 21 years, an employee at the Fore River works. He was taken sick the first of the week and was removed to the City Hospital on Tuesday night. He died on the 28th of the week.

The other case was Stephen H. Hickey, the 10 months old son of Thomas H. Palmer of 306 Beale street. The child was taken with a cold early in the week. It grew rapidly worse and Wednesday was diagnosed as cerebro-spinal meningitis. The child died Thursday morning.

The family came to Quincy from New Brunswick a few weeks ago. The Board of Health are taking extra precautions to prevent the spread of the disease, and the Beale street house is quarantined.

The report on Friday that one of Quincy's physicians was ill with meningitis proves to be but an idle rumor. John Hickey, the man who is ill at the hospital, is reported as doing well and will probably recover.

In 1897, the year when the disease reached its maximum, there were three deaths in Quincy, 185 in Boston, 52 in Somerville, 14 in Woburn, and 10 in Cambridge, 10 in Chelsea and others.

Friday morning passed away one of Quincy's, best known, and most loved women, Mrs. Mary A. Perkins. For several months she has been an invalid, caused by a fall. Although suffering much since the fall, she was cheerful, and interested in the pleasures of her friends. She has been missed by members of the Fragment society, and First church, and by the poor to whom she was ever kind.

After a life well lived, and one that was full of service to her friends, which she has recently had to bear.

CITY BRIEFS.

G. W. Sargent has returned from his trip South.

The Quincy Yacht club is arranging for a smoker to be held at an early date.

Granite Lodge, Sons of St. George, has contributed $10 to the Brockton relief fund.

Mrs. Mary Marden of Quincy is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Geo. I. Aldrich of Brookline.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman F. McIntire have taken apartments at Hotel Greenleaf for the summer.

William J. Vaughn, the new keeper of the Quincy House, assumed his duties Monday night.

It is reported that one or two big real estate transfer deals will be consummated this week.

A new dry goods store is to be opened on Temple street, in the Adams building, by Boston parties.

Frank A. Marzar, after an absence of a few weeks at his home in New York, is again at Hotel Greenleaf.

Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, are arranging for their annual concert and ball to be held April 24.

The warm, mild weather Sunday afternoon brought out scores of bicycles and automobiles. It was an ideal spring day.

Mr. R. L. Goldsmith and son of Washington street have been the guests of relatives at Middleboro the past week.

A basket social was held by the Bethany C. E. society in the chapel Monday evening. Some baskets sold as high as $2.

Freeman D. Grant has commenced the erection of another three-tentement house on Grant street near the street railway car barn.

Mrs. Mary E. Dearborn returned on Monday from Manchester, N. H., and resumed her position as principal of the Coddingdon school.

Mrs. Mattie Holton, teacher at Rollinsford, N. H., is enjoying a two weeks' vacation with her sisters and brother at their home on Edwards street.

The Commissioner should look after the trees on city property at Houghs Neck. It is reported that these trees are thick with gypsy moth webs.

At a meeting of the directors of the Mt. Wollaston National bank on Tuesday, a semi-annual dividend of 3 percent, payable April 1, was declared.

A special edition of the Golden-Rod, the Quincy High school paper, will be issued in a few weeks. It will contain original prize stories and illustrations by pupils.

Some days ago the Board of Health put a gypsy moth web secured from a tree, under glass. The glass was placed in the sun and the moths have been hatched out.

Unknown parties entered the grain store of A. J. Richards & Son on Sunday and stole twenty-five cents in money and some pens. Entrance was gained through the engine room.

H. G. Smith, manager of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., who has occupied the E. A. Perkins house on Adams street for the past two years, will move April first to President's Hill.

M. D. Phelan and family are to move this week from Washington street, to Dorchester, and will be greatly missed by their many friends, neighbors and associates.

It is said that three seasons' work on a tree by a brown-tail will kill the tree. Many elm trees in Quincy are still showing the nests and eggs, although they were to be allowed fall away. Is Quincy to lose all its beautiful old elm trees?

Local real estate men report that there is an increasing demand for land for building purposes, also for tenements and that the indications are that business in the building line will be buoyant for some time, as the weather becomes any way settled.

Representative Freeman was paired against, and Representatives Nicol was not recorded on the vote in the House on Tuesday to substitute the Weeks bill for the adverse report of the committee. The substitute was lost 85 to 93 with 14 pairs.

Thousands of people visited Brockton on Sunday to view the ruins of the B. B. Grover & Co. factory, that was burned a week ago, and in which so many lives were lost. Extra cars were run on the line between Quincy and that city and hundreds of people carried.

The School Committee held a late session Saturday night. They had before them the plans for a single complete addition to the High school, that has been secured by the Committee on Public Buildings of the City Council. The School Board did not finish its examination of the plans at this session.

A meeting of the Central Conference of Day Nurseries is to be held in Perkins hall, 264 Boylston street, Boston, on Wednesday April 5th at quarter of eleven. Dr. Jeffrey R. Brackett, Quincy, will speak on "Long range views in social work." The directors of the Quincy Day Nursery are invited to attend the meeting.

The grounds around the Thomas Crane Public Library are looking unusually green this time of year. The grass is showing green. The removal of the old fence south of the library is a great improvement to the looks of the library lawn and when the Coddingdon street land is grassed over the whole place will be most attractive.

Miss Mary Carruthers is confined to her home on Spear street.

Miss B. A. Hayden has accepted a position in a Boston office.

Dr. and Mrs. John F. Welch entertained their Whist club on Wednesday evening.

The alarm from Box 171 at 3.55 Friday afternoon was for a grass fire off Main street.

At association football, Thursday evening, the Quinceys beat the Fore River team 4 to 0.

George T. Magee is receiving many congratulations upon his election as clerk of the City Council.

The frost is nearly all out of the ground and farmers have commenced to put their garden seed in.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Adams have returned Tuesday from Europe where they have been spending the winter.

Frank Fessenden Crane is moving his furniture store and real estate office from Chestnut to Temple street.

Louis A. Newton, a well known New York detective, is in town on a visit to his nephew Walter M. Packard.

The Board of Health is getting its hospitals near the city farm ready in case it should be needed.

A Sunday school teachers' institute will be held at Bethany church on Friday afternoon and evening of next week.

That brick wall, after the English style, in front of the Brooks Adams place on Adams street, is quite an improvement.

Sheppard and Joel F. Sheppard, 24, are home from Cornell University. They were accompanied by three college chums.

The residence of James Nicol, superintendent of Mt. Wollaston cemetery, has been completed by telephone. The number is 278 ring 3.

Miss Eliza Crane, having spent a very pleasant winter in New York, has returned to her former residence, 41 Sea Street, North Weymouth.

Mrs. R. G. Staples and children are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carruthers on Spear street, while their home on Edison Park is being prepared.

The Wednesday night whist parties are to end next week when Mr. and Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard of Greenleaf street, will entertain the club at their home.

The regular monthly meeting of the Quincy Day Nursery association is to be held on Tuesday April 4th at the hall past two in the council chamber at City Hall.

The Junior Friday club is to be entertained on Monday afternoon by Mrs. Walter E. Burke at the home of Mrs. King, Adams street. Only a few more meetings are to be held this season by the club.

Mrs. William B. Rice came out from Boston Wednesday afternoon to attend the meeting of the Quincy Women's club, and Mrs. Rice are to return to their home on Adams street in a few weeks.

The committee on cities of the Legislature reported on Wednesday a bill to provide for the tenure of office, good behavior of chief engineers and assistant engineers of fire departments.

Those who have known of the suffering of little Robert Talbot, the younger son of Mrs. Josephine Talbot, of Glencon place, will be glad to hear that he passed to his eternal rest, early on the morning of Wednesday the 29th.

A County Convention of the King's Daughters will be held at the Harvard street church, Brookline, on Thursday, April 6, at 10 o'clock A. M. The train that leaves Quincy at 8.46 will connect with the train for Brookline at 9.30.

Rev. Frank Wright Pratt and family of Wollaston have been the guests this week of Rev. and Mrs. C. Butler of Russell Park. They are preparing to go to their new home in Hopkedge, where Mr. Pratt has been called and is now preaching.

Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution are to be entertained at a social meeting on Monday afternoon, April third by Miss Mary J. Pratt, of 3 Queen street, Dorchester. An early start is to be made; the Quincy members leaving on the half past one car for Neponset.

Mrs. James H. Slade, Sr., left this week for Holyoke to visit her daughter, Mrs. Andrews, en route New York. She is to be away for a few days.

After enjoying a smoke on Wednesday, while driving to Hingham, John W. Fitzgerald, of the Quincy Bee Co., put his pipe into his pocket. Before he became aware of it a lively blaze was kindled, and his clothing was considerably burned and also one of his hands before he could extinguish it.

The directors of the Massachusetts society of the Daughters of the Revolution gave a dancing party at Exeter chambers, Boston on Saturday afternoon for the Junior class and Daughters. At the close of the dance ice cake and cake were served. The John Adams chapter was represented by Carl and Bert Prescott.

A very enjoyable social dance was held Wednesday evening at Music hall under the auspices of the entertainment committee of Rural lodge, A. F. and A. M. About sixty couples participated and dancing was in order until 11.30. Outfit orchestra furnished music. Fruit punch was served during the entire evening.

The Boston Herald announces to teachers and pupils that the option of transferring teaching pupils expires on Saturday, April 1.

At the poor farm, the cemetery and along the Houghs Neck road the elm trees show many brown-tail moth nests. If some one would devise a method of getting at these nests at small expense it would be appreciated by owners of elm trees. Most of the pear and small trees have been quite thoroughly gone over by property owners.

With one exception, the maximum temperature Tuesday of 68 degrees was the highest it has been in March for nine years. The maximum last year was 66 degrees. In 1903 it was 74 degrees, in 1902 it was 65 degrees, in 1901 it was 50 degrees, in 1900 it was 65 degrees, in 1899 it was 63 degrees, in 1898 it was 65 degrees, and in 1897 it was 58 degrees.

George S. T. Whiting observed his 81st birthday Wednesday at his home, Quincy avenue, surrounded by his family and friends. Mr. Whiting has not enjoyed as good health as usual of late, and is confined to his home. His friends however did not forget that he was passing another milestone, and there were many well wishers who gathered about his home, and presented him with flowers, fruit and other tokens.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Stetson, of 81st street, are intending going to their summer home at Harwich, earlier than usual this season, as they are to make extensive alterations on their place, and wish to personally oversee them. They entertain hospitably throughout the season, especially at the week end, when Mr. Stetson is home. Dates for visits are all ready looked for by many of their friends who are even now looking forward to enjoying the sea breeze, and country life of the Cape.

Spring goods have arrived at Miss Hubbard's.

Miss E. B. Collins began her spring opening Friday, to continue all next week.

A number of people are busy having bonfires this week—a sure sign of spring.

Are you a member of the Good Will club? Many are pleased to have the opportunity.

Most everybody has commenced to clean up about their estates. Keep up the good work.

This is the season of grass fires, and the frequent useless calling out of the fire department.

The members of the police department were presented Thursday night with pocket match safes.

It surely must be spring for George Morton was seen in City Square Thursday wearing a white straw hat.

Frank W. Crane has had plans made for a new house which he will erect on Avon way, President's hill, for his own occupancy.

There was a rehearsal held at Bethany church, Thursday evening, for a concert to be given under the direction of Mrs. M. C. Page.

It is understood that Fred B. Rice intends to do down or remove the building on Chestnut street, recently occupied by Frank F. Crane.

Now that the automobile season has arrived the revenue of the court will probably be materially increased by fines paid by speeders.

Last week Thursday was the lucky March day to trade at the store of Geo. W. Jones. People too, are catching on to the generous offer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Flowers of Braintree, formerly of Quincy, were guests of Mrs. Flowers' aunt, Samuel W. Webster of Beacon street, Boston, on Saturday, March 25.

Quite an improvement has been made in the show windows of the store of George W. Jones by raising the floor of the window above the window sash and by placing at the back rich curtains of green plush.

Rev. E. N. Hardy attended on Thursday the meeting of the Congregational ministers who are protesting against the acceptance of the $100,000 gift from Rockefeller to the American Board of Foreign Missions.

Gentle showers laid the dust last night, but the streets are getting dirty and the appearance of the street sprinkler is awaited to abate the dust nuisance.

The water sprinkler was used on the city street last night, before the City Council, calls for the street sprinkling service to commence April 15.

The Friday club journey to Brighton next week by its regular meeting, Mrs. Frederic Aldrich Tupper entertaining the club. Mrs. F. Schenckberger has prepared a pleasing program the subject of which will be "William Makepeace Thackeray and his life and letters."

Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Every have this week issued invitations to the marriage reception of their daughter, Florence Raymond and Mr. Lawrence Heaton Sturtevant, for Thursday evening April the twentieth, from eight until ten o'clock, at their home on Adams street.

Miss Randall gives the third and last of her Lenten travel talks next Tuesday afternoon, at half-past three, at the home of Mrs. Francis Brewer, Summer street. Her subject is to be "Jacobite ballads or Swiss folk songs," and she will be assisted by Mrs. John D. Buckingham, whose singing is always so much enjoyed.

The birthplace of President John Adams is to be open this afternoon for a sale of home-made candy and cake by the John Adams Chapter of the Sons and Daughters of the Revolution. The young people hope for a large patronage as the proceeds go to replenish their fund. Since January 1, 1905, the fund of the state is doing good work under the direction of Mrs. Frank Granger of Randolph.

Webster and Mr. Heath. Ice cream, cake and coffee were served during the evening.

SOUTH QUINCY.
Andrew D. King of Vinal Haven, Me., who was placed under arrest by Inspector Bradley, as being a fugitive from justice, left on Saturday morning for Maine in custody of Deputy Sheriff D. E. White. Sheriff White was armed with a warrant charging King with the murder of his wife, the death of his wife. King waived requisition papers. The court promptly acquitted him.

There is considerable dissatisfaction among the granite cutters over the terms of the Wollaston granite cutters' union. The terms are considered too low. Many of them complain that they are unable to obtain work. On the other hand the Manufacturers say that they can not pay $3 to a man who is not able to earn it, and they are not allowed to hire a man and pay him less, even if he is willing to work.

Alexander C. Maroon and family have moved from President avenue to Dorchester, and will be greatly missed by their many friends and acquaintances.

The meeting at the United Presbyterian church last night was of such an impressive character that it caused by the congregation to continue them this week. Rev. Heslip of Brockton preached very strong and helpful sermons last week and his services were very much appreciated. It is hoped that he may be able to return a few nights this week. The largest number of communicants took sacrament Sunday in the history of the church. A very great desire prevails in the church for a sweeping revival for Quincy and New England and many of them are going up to God for this much needed blessing upon the church. Services tonight at 7.30.

School Street Blaze.
The alarm from Box 31 at 1.42 Friday afternoon was for a brick fire on the roof of the old barn on the Daniel Barker estate off School street. The fire started from a spark from a passing locomotive alighting on the old and dry shingles.

The high wind quickly fanned the spark into a blaze, and when the alarm was sounded the whole roof was burning briskly, and sparks were flying in all directions.

The department apparatus was quickly on the scene, and the fire was quickly under control. A line of hose was run to the burning building, but there were no men to handle it. Chief Williams, and one of the permanent men tried to direct the stream onto the roof, but with the water pressure, and awkward position, they could do but little.

A ladder was needed and one was brought, but there was no one to raise it. In the meantime the Chief and one man did the best they could. There were plenty of bystanders, but none to help.

It was some minutes before the call men began to arrive. Before that time a burning barrel had fallen on the roof of the McDonnell estate, but there were no firemen to look for it. Some boys, however, climbed to the roof by the aid of the lightning rod, and failing to extinguish the fire with their caps, pulled the shingles off.

Fortunately but little damage was done by fire. The fact that more men are needed at the early stages of a fire was practically demonstrated.

At 2.30 the apparatus responded on a still alarm for a slight fire at George O. Langley's on Washington street.

SATURDAY, APRIL 8, 1905.

Declines the Honor.

"Good humor was restored to a school room in one of the public schools of the city of the honor, says the Philadelphia Press, by an impatient speech of the teacher. The young woman who had charge of the class had become exasperated to the last degree by the mischievous tricks of some of the boys. She was at the point where hysterics were to be safely predicted if some relief did not come. She looked up from her book and saw one of the largest girls in the class crouched in an ungainly attitude over her desk. Her feet were stretched over the aisle and, worst of all, she was chewing gum. It was the last straw. The teacher sprang to her feet and snapped out: "Maria, sit up. Take that gum out of your mouth and put your feet in." The shout of laughter from the pupils cleared the atmosphere, and the rest of the session was one of the pleasantest of the term."

The friends of Miss Julia E. Underwood, who proposed to give her a grand reception next week, are in much the same predicament, "they have put their foot in it." Next week Miss Underwood completes fifty years of service as a Quincy school teacher, and they thought it would be a happy thing to have a reunion of former pupils and friends, and all the plans had matured for Thursday evening, April 13.

When it came to the knowledge of Miss Underwood, she wrote the following letter for publication and, in deference to her wishes it has been decided to declare off the proposed reception: Editor of Quincy Ledger:

As in your yesterday's paper there was a suggestion of a reception in recognition of my fifty years of service in the Coddington school, I take this moment of informing the public that an occasion will not be in accordance with my wishes. I positively decline the honor, at this time.

Yours truly,
Julia E. Underwood.

Post Office to Move.

There are many rumors that the Quincy post office may shortly be removed to a new location. It is a well known fact that twice as much floor space is needed to properly transact the business of this office, the receipts of which are now in excess of $50,000 per annum. There is not room for the large number of clerks and carriers which it is necessary to employ or for the general public, especially in the registry department, where there should be more security.

The lease of the present quarters in the Adams building will expire on July 1, and proposals are wanted for more commodious quarters.

Postmaster Hammond is non-committal as to what is being done, but there is more or less activity at the head of Granite street; stables and other buildings in the rear are being moved or demolished, and there may soon be a grand transformation scene.

Henry H. Faxon, the owner, Mr. Hammond and post office inspectors have viewed the site frequently of late, and the indications are that a new block may replace the old wooden buildings opposite Hotel Greenleaf near the Dr. Welch block.

The location is a good one for the post office, in fact a former site of the office when the late John B. Bass was postmaster.

Many would like very much to see this property improved, as it would add considerable to the appearance of the business center of Quincy.

President Roosevelt is having a big time on his vacation this week in Texas. At Temple the citizens learned the train would stop, hurriedly called a city council meeting and passed an emergency ordinance, requiring the train to stop three minutes. The President laughed heartily when informed by telegraph, and by his instructions to stop. Reaching San Antonio on Thursday evening thousands were waiting to receive him. He was welcomed with cheers by his old comrades in arms, the Rough Riders, who were holding their annual reunion near the historic Alamo. Business houses and residences were decorated with flags and bunting and the exercises on Friday were the most enthusiastic ever held in Texas.

Notes and Comments.

The Birmingham News says that the "high water mark in appropriations should set people to thinking." It generally sets people to paying.

There are at least two important suggestions to new contributors. First, send the copy as soon as possible and sign your name on the front or back of the paper.

The Patriot records today the death of five former residents, and the deaths of two Quincy people out of town, also more than the usual number of deaths in this city for one week.

The brewers and distillers are about the only men in the country who are not opposed to the tax on coffee. The less satisfying the poor man's breakfast is, the more money it means for the saloon keepers.

Europe is continually pouring her most undesirable population into America but we are doing a little something to get even when all the best stuff of things who are able are flocking to Europe to escape the federal investigations.

Senator Morgan of Alabama is reported to have said: "I do not know how to speak of this Santo Domingo protocol. This is the first time on record that Senator Morgan has been rendered speechless. No one need be afraid that it is a chronic case of silence. By the time Congress convenes Senator Morgan will have regained articulation."

The new movement among naturalists and sportsmen for the substitution of the camera for the gun is looked upon with favor by President Roosevelt, who says in a letter to Robert K. Job, published in the Review of Reviews for April, that the one who gets the best pictures is the one who shoots the fewest "varmints." The President does not think it at all advisable that the gun should be given up, nor does it seem to him that shooting wild game under proper restrictions can be legitimately opposed by any one. The game laws of domestic animals shall be kept for food, but he declares that there is altogether too much shooting, and he welcomes the camera and the evolution of the sportsman into the naturalist and the lover of wild things.

Mothers' Meeting.

The Mothers' meeting held in Bethany chapel on Wednesday afternoon was not only an enjoyable but a profitable afternoon for the fifty ladies present. Miss Rand, a trained nurse, gave a paper on the "Accidents and disorders occurring in childhood." Mrs. V. E. Miller lifted their thoughts to spiritual things during the devotional exercises, and Mrs. E. C. Page and Mrs. E. V. Pitts rendered songs of praise.

Some mothers brought their little ones who were tenderly cared for by the kindergarten committee in an adjoining room.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

FIFTH SUNDAY IN LENT.

Church services are observed in this parish without charge, but those who are desirous of attending each week even though it is but a small sum, are requested to contribute to the fund. Letter from the State House.

Boston, April 5, 1905.

If matters were not running so smoothly between Gov. Douglas and the legislature, the governor would not have had his breakfast for president at the dinner of the Springfield democracy on Monday evening. Therefore these harmonious relations are a material part of the political situation of the times. Now, it is interesting to hear some of the comment which is made upon the governor's attitude. It is to the effect that longer familiarity with the governor's office has made it modify his original assumption that there had been extravagance in the state administration, and to come down to the more tenable proposition that the large expenses were due to the high prices of the times. This makes him bear less heavily upon the administration of the state. But, there were specific charges in his Springfield address that items which have been charged to current expenses, such as concreting, new boilers, painting, and so on, were put into permanent improvement, and paid for by bonds issued for a long time.

The effort to limit the height of buildings in cities outside of Boston is 125 feet cannot be brought. The bill was reported to the senate, but the opposition quietly killed it and no effort was made to resurrect it.

An adverse report has been made on allowing the harvesting of cranberries on Sunday, and it is the hope of report which is accepted by the legislature.

Rule.

Eighty years of hopes and fears, Eighty years of joys and tears; Eighty years of battles fought, Eighty years of changes wrought; Tell me not they were for naught, Eighty years of garnered lore, All that's true the heavens will store. Eighty years of work well done, Chery as when first begun.

Much sympathy is felt for Miss Mary Perkins, the daughter, who is now alone and who will miss so much the companionship of her mother. For years they have been inseparable, but the last of the family, the others passing away years ago. In her bereavement she has many sympathizers.

Mrs. Perkins belonged to the French family a large and influential family in Quincy for generations. Her husband, John B. Perkins, was a native of Quincy, and was a contractor at the time of the building of the Town Hall in 1841, the building now being occupied as a City Hall.

For the Public Schools.

The Trustees of the Public Library are about to place a half-ton portrait of Thomas Crane in each of the public school houses in the city. It is the hope of the trustees that the schools and library may thus be made closer and that the features and benefactions of the Crane family may be still more firmly fixed in the minds of the coming generations.

Thomas Crane, a native of Quincy, who upon his death in New York about 25 years ago requested his heirs to erect at Quincy a Public Library building. The corner stone was laid on Washington's Birthday in 1881, and Crane Memorial hall was dedicated the next year, the building about $40,000. The family have since improved the grounds, and recently at an expense of $18,000 have purchased the land between the library and Codding street, making the grounds extensive and beautiful.

On October 18, 1903, Quincy observed the centennial of the birth of Thomas Crane, and it will ever be pleased to hold him in loving remembrance.

When a school boy Thomas Crane lived near the Fore river at Quincy Point, and had to walk daily between his home and the "Fishing Field," now City Hall, to attend the "Fishing school" as it was then called.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of the week, says the Herald, is that of John Adams and Miss Marion Morse, has called forth numerous congratulations and greatly interested society here and in Kansas City, where both young people are now living. Miss Morse is a daughter of Col. Charles P. Morse, who is a brother of the Hon. Robert M. Morse of Jamaica Plain. Col. Morse's business interests are in Kansas City, so that the family make their home there in the winter and are in Palm Beach in the summer near the Robert M. Morse. Miss Morse, who belongs to the older generation of girls, is a charming, well educated, and is an attractive and talented girl. She keeps up her associations with a number of those who came out here in Boston, and many congratulations have gone to her from them.

Mr. Adams, who graduated from Harvard in 1898, as did his brother, Henry Adams, 24, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams (the latter born Ogden), whose all-the-year-round home is at "Barnum Wood," Lincoln.

Miss Elizabeth Adams is the sister. Mr. Adams is now in Quincy, having been here since his graduation to go into business and has remained there ever since. The wedding will not be until autumn. Mr. Adams formerly lived on Presidents hill, Quincy.

Gone to Rest.

Mrs. Adeline Williams, wife of John Williams, of 224 Grand street, aged 32 years, committed suicide at an early hour on Tuesday by strangulation.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams occupied the street front tenement of the house. According to Mr. Williams they retired about 10 o'clock Monday night. It was somewhere about 3 A. M. when Mr. Williams awoke and found his wife missing. He immediately began a search for her and found her dead in a closet.

Friends of Mrs. Williams are unable to give any reason for her rash act.

Bartlett Hayden.

News has reached Quincy of the death of Bartlett Hayden, of Fitzwilliam, N. H. Mr. Hayden has relatives living in Quincy, a brother and two sisters. They are Mrs. Sallie Harris, Mrs. T. J. H. Thayer and James A. Hayden.

The Fitzwilliam family consists of: Mr. Hayden has lived in Fitzwilliam since 1872. His death March 30 being due to Bright's disease. He was born and brought up in Quincy, Mass. He was a hard-working man, a stone cutter by trade and was four times married. He belonged to no club or secret society, but attended the M. E. church. He was popular among his associates. Original and bubbling over with wit.

—Beaten into insensibility by a bartender and made partly deaf by the assault, Daniel J. Costello, prominent in political affairs of the South End, Boston, brought suit against the employer of his assailant, James M. Fitzgerald, 327 Washington street, Boston, and was on Thursday awarded $8,000 damages by the jury in the first session of the Superior Court.

Daughters of the Revolution.

Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, were to Dorchester for their April meeting, being guests on Monday afternoon of Miss Mary J. Pratt of Queen street. About forty were present. The regent presided at the business meeting, after which the program committee took charge.

There was singing by Miss Alice Hultman, which was much enjoyed. The paper of the afternoon was by Rev. William Hyde of Trinity church, Weymouth. His subject "The Influence of the Eastern Shires of England on the life of New England," proved an interesting one, and he had attentive listeners. It was the same paper which he prepared and read at a recent meeting of the Weymouth Historical society, and which received favorable comment from the members of that society.

All the members enjoyed thoroughly the afternoon session, and the ladies and having to stand part of the way not dampening their good spirits.

Ladies' Night.

A rare treat is in store for those who will be privileged to attend the coming ladies' night and banquet of Bethany church brotherhood. This will be held Tuesday evening, April 11 at 8:30 o'clock in the chapel.

There will be several invited guests present and the principal speaker of the evening will be Rev. Allan Stockdale of Berkeley Temple, Boston. His subject will be "The Corner of a man's mind turn up or down?"

This address is a foretaste as well as an entertaining one and members and friends are urged to procure their tickets early.

Mrs. Mary A. Perkins.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Perkins was held on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock from her late home on Washington street and was largely attended by relatives, friends and neighbors. Rev. E. C. Butler of First church read the scriptures and Rev. Daniel Moore of Northfield, formerly of First church, spoke most feelingly of his regard for Mrs. Perkins; how they had worked together for the church and Quincy Charitable society. Where ever there was anything to be done, or any need of assistance, Mrs. Perkins was always ready; a good friend in good or bad weather. Hers was a full life well rounded out and there were many to hold her in a loving memory.

The prayer and benediction were by Mr. Butler, and three selections were sung by the choir. "Art thou weary? Art thou languid," and "Hark! Hark! my soul," were feelingly sung by the vocal choir of Christ church.

The casket was backed with flowers, and they were also placed about the room, mite testimonies from many friends. One can, but feel that here were:

Eighty years of hopes and fears, Eighty years of joys and tears; Eighty years of battles fought, Eighty years of changes wrought; Tell me not they were for naught, Eighty years of garnered lore, All that's true the heavens will store. Eighty years of work well done, Chery as when first begun.

Fifty Years.

An evening drawing school was established in October, 1855. Music was introduced in 1881; nature work in 1880; sewing in grades V to VIII in 1892; cooking in the High school in 1892; and vertical writing in grades I, II and III in 1896. The tenure of office for teachers was about 4 in 1880.

The Adams Academy for boys was opened in 1872, and the Woodward Institute for girls in 1891.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

The old Washington school was built in 1858, the Wollaston and Quincy in 1873, the Washington enlarged in 1876, the Coddington enlarged in 1876, and the Adams in 1879, the John Hancock (the first brick schoolhouse) was erected in 1880, the Wollaston enlarged in 1880, the new Willard was built in 1891, the Lincoln in 1892, the present High school in 1894, the Gridley Bryant and Massachusetts Fields in 1896, the Crane in 1900, and the new Washington in 1903.

A public library was established in 1870, and the Thomas Crane public library was built in 1881.

The progress of Quincy in improvements in 50 years is well known—electric cars, water system, sewer system, telephone exchange, hospital, police department, street lighting, water, gas and electric lights, etc., etc.

A quotation from the report of the School Committee of 1856 will be of interest:

"The growth of the town, taken in connection with the improvement of the system of public instruction all over the Commonwealth, is found to be not without its effects on the duties of your School Committee. Instead of occasional labors, from time to time, by the sacrifice of a few teachers' intervals of three months, properly to fulfill the requisitions of the statutes demands months. There are now eighteen schools in this town, each of which must be visited quarterly by the whole committee, and monthly by some one of the members. The quarterly visits, if made as they should be, would absorb at least 60 days, the monthly visits at least 12 more of each committee-man."

"In addition to which is the duty of consultation of preliminary examinations of teachers and scholars, of general supervision and of co-operation with the heads of the respective schools and occasionally with parents. Such is the exact statement of what the school system in Quincy now requires to keep it up with the movement of the times."

HAS TRAVELLED BUT LITTLE.

Upon two occasions only has Miss Underwood travelled outside the boundaries of good old Massachusetts, both times to the granite state of New Hampshire, but her friends now seem determined that she shall see more of this country of ours and the prospects are excellent that this summer she will journey to the Pacific coast, visiting the Lewis and Clark fair at Portland, Oregon.

Miss Underwood's only near relatives in Quincy are the sons, Mr. John P. Bigelow, and a cousin, Miss Mary P. Underwood, who is a daughter of the late E. W. Underwood, and is a teacher at the John Hancock building. She has a brother and sister residing at 32 Mudge street, Lynn: Mr. Charles Edwin Underwood, and Mrs. J. Warren Lamplier.

Miss Morse, who belongs to the older generation of girls, is a charming, well educated, and is an attractive and talented girl. She keeps up her associations with a number of those who came out here in Boston, and many congratulations have gone to her from them.

Mr. Adams, who graduated from Harvard in 1898, as did his brother, Henry Adams, 24, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams (the latter born Ogden), whose all-the-year-round home is at "Barnum Wood," Lincoln.

Miss Elizabeth Adams is the sister. Mr. Adams is now in Quincy, having been here since his graduation to go into business and has remained there ever since. The wedding will not be until autumn. Mr. Adams formerly lived on Presidents hill, Quincy.

Gone to Rest.

Mrs. Adeline Williams, wife of John Williams, of 224 Grand street, aged 32 years, committed suicide at an early hour on Tuesday by strangulation.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams occupied the street front tenement of the house. According to Mr. Williams they retired about 10 o'clock Monday night. It was somewhere about 3 A. M. when Mr. Williams awoke and found his wife missing. He immediately began a search for her and found her dead in a closet.

Friends of Mrs. Williams are unable to give any reason for her rash act.

Bartlett Hayden.

News has reached Quincy of the death of Bartlett Hayden, of Fitzwilliam, N. H. Mr. Hayden has relatives living in Quincy, a brother and two sisters. They are Mrs. Sallie Harris, Mrs. T. J. H. Thayer and James A. Hayden.

The Fitzwilliam family consists of: Mr. Hayden has lived in Fitzwilliam since 1872. His death March 30 being due to Bright's disease. He was born and brought up in Quincy, Mass. He was a hard-working man, a stone cutter by trade and was four times married. He belonged to no club or secret society, but attended the M. E. church. He was popular among his associates. Original and bubbling over with wit.

—Beaten into insensibility by a bartender and made partly deaf by the assault, Daniel J. Costello, prominent in political affairs of the South End, Boston, brought suit against the employer of his assailant, James M. Fitzgerald, 327 Washington street, Boston, and was on Thursday awarded $8,000 damages by the jury in the first session of the Superior Court.

Daughters of the Revolution.

Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, were to Dorchester for their April meeting, being guests on Monday afternoon of Miss Mary J. Pratt of Queen street. About forty were present. The regent presided at the business meeting, after which the program committee took charge.

There was singing by Miss Alice Hultman, which was much enjoyed. The paper of the afternoon was by Rev. William Hyde of Trinity church, Weymouth. His subject "The Influence of the Eastern Shires of England on the life of New England," proved an interesting one, and he had attentive listeners. It was the same paper which he prepared and read at a recent meeting of the Weymouth Historical society, and which received favorable comment from the members of that society.

All the members enjoyed thoroughly the afternoon session, and the ladies and having to stand part of the way not dampening their good spirits.

Ladies' Night.

A rare treat is in store for those who will be privileged to attend the coming ladies' night and banquet of Bethany church brotherhood. This will be held Tuesday evening, April 11 at 8:30 o'clock in the chapel.

There will be several invited guests present and the principal speaker of the evening will be Rev. Allan Stockdale of Berkeley Temple, Boston. His subject will be "The Corner of a man's mind turn up or down?"

This address is a foretaste as well as an entertaining one and members and friends are urged to procure their tickets early.

Mrs. Mary A. Perkins.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Perkins was held on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock from her late home on Washington street and was largely attended by relatives, friends and neighbors. Rev. E. C. Butler of First church read the scriptures and Rev. Daniel Moore of Northfield, formerly of First church, spoke most feelingly of his regard for Mrs. Perkins; how they had worked together for the church and Quincy Charitable society. Where ever there was anything to be done, or any need of assistance, Mrs. Perkins was always ready; a good friend in good or bad weather. Hers was a full life well rounded out and there were many to hold her in a loving memory.

The prayer and benediction were by Mr. Butler, and three selections were sung by the choir. "Art thou weary? Art thou languid," and "Hark! Hark! my soul," were feelingly sung by the vocal choir of Christ church.

The casket was backed with flowers, and they were also placed about the room, mite testimonies from many friends. One can, but feel that here were:

Eighty years of hopes and fears, Eighty years of joys and tears; Eighty years of battles fought, Eighty years of changes wrought; Tell me not they were for naught, Eighty years of garnered lore, All that's true the heavens will store. Eighty years of work well done, Chery as when first begun.

Much sympathy is felt for Miss Mary Perkins, the daughter, who is now alone and who will miss so much the companionship of her mother. For years they have been inseparable, but the last of the family, the others passing away years ago. In her bereavement she has many sympathizers.

Mrs. Perkins belonged to the French family a large and influential family in Quincy for generations. Her husband, John B. Perkins, was a native of Quincy, and was a contractor at the time of the building of the Town Hall in 1841, the building now being occupied as a City Hall.

For the Public Schools.

The Trustees of the Public Library are about to place a half-ton portrait of Thomas Crane in each of the public school houses in the city. It is the hope of the trustees that the schools and library may thus be made closer and that the features and benefactions of the Crane family may be still more firmly fixed in the minds of the coming generations.

Thomas Crane, a native of Quincy, who upon his death in New York about 25 years ago requested his heirs to erect at Quincy a Public Library building. The corner stone was laid on Washington's Birthday in 1881, and Crane Memorial hall was dedicated the next year, the building about $40,000. The family have since improved the grounds, and recently at an expense of $18,000 have purchased the land between the library and Codding street, making the grounds extensive and beautiful.

On October 18, 1903, Quincy observed the centennial of the birth of Thomas Crane, and it will ever be pleased to hold him in loving remembrance.

When a school boy Thomas Crane lived near the Fore river at Quincy Point, and had to walk daily between his home and the "Fishing Field," now City Hall, to attend the "Fishing school" as it was then called.

Fifty Years.

An evening drawing school was established in October, 1855. Music was introduced in 1881; nature work in 1880; sewing in grades V to VIII in 1892; cooking in the High school in 1892; and vertical writing in grades I, II and III in 1896. The tenure of office for teachers was about 4 in 1880.

The Adams Academy for boys was opened in 1872, and the Woodward Institute for girls in 1891.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

The old Washington school was built in 1858, the Wollaston and Quincy in 1873, the Washington enlarged in 1876, the Coddington enlarged in 1876, and the Adams in 1879, the John Hancock (the first brick schoolhouse) was erected in 1880, the Wollaston enlarged in 1880, the new Willard was built in 1891, the Lincoln in 1892, the present High school in 1894, the Gridley Bryant and Massachusetts Fields in 1896, the Crane in 1900, and the new Washington in 1903.

A public library was established in 1870, and the Thomas Crane public library was built in 1881.

The progress of Quincy in improvements in 50 years is well known—electric cars, water system, sewer system, telephone exchange, hospital, police department, street lighting, water, gas and electric lights, etc., etc.

A quotation from the report of the School Committee of 1856 will be of interest:

"The growth of the town, taken in connection with the improvement of the system of public instruction all over the Commonwealth, is found to be not without its effects on the duties of your School Committee. Instead of occasional labors, from time to time, by the sacrifice of a few teachers' intervals of three months, properly to fulfill the requisitions of the statutes demands months. There are now eighteen schools in this town, each of which must be visited quarterly by the whole committee, and monthly by some one of the members. The quarterly visits, if made as they should be, would absorb at least 60 days, the monthly visits at least 12 more of each committee-man."

"In addition to which is the duty of consultation of preliminary examinations of teachers and scholars, of general supervision and of co-operation with the heads of the respective schools and occasionally with parents. Such is the exact statement of what the school system in Quincy now requires to keep it up with the movement of the times."

HAS TRAVELLED BUT LITTLE.

Upon two occasions only has Miss Underwood travelled outside the boundaries of good old Massachusetts, both times to the granite state of New Hampshire, but her friends now seem determined that she shall see more of this country of ours and the prospects are excellent that this summer she will journey to the Pacific coast, visiting the Lewis and Clark fair at Portland, Oregon.

Miss Underwood's only near relatives in Quincy are the sons, Mr. John P. Bigelow, and a cousin, Miss Mary P. Underwood, who is a daughter of the late E. W. Underwood, and is a teacher at the John Hancock building. She has a brother and sister residing at 32 Mudge street, Lynn: Mr. Charles Edwin Underwood, and Mrs. J. Warren Lamplier.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of the week, says the Herald, is that of John Adams and Miss Marion Morse, has called forth numerous congratulations and greatly interested society here and in Kansas City, where both young people are now living. Miss Morse is a daughter of Col. Charles P. Morse, who is a brother of the Hon. Robert M. Morse of Jamaica Plain. Col. Morse's business interests are in Kansas City, so that the family make their home there in the winter and are in Palm Beach in the summer near the Robert M. Morse. Miss Morse, who belongs to the older generation of girls, is a charming, well educated, and is an attractive and talented girl. She keeps up her associations with a number of those who came out here in Boston, and many congratulations have gone to her from them.

Mr. Adams, who graduated from Harvard in 1898, as did his brother, Henry Adams, 24, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams (the latter born Ogden), whose all-the-year-round home is at "Barnum Wood," Lincoln.

Poetry.

A Tale with a Moral.
"I was a glum old man, 'mid the lowering shades
Of a forest dark and dank;
And every decent creature sleep,
For the gray of dawn had scarcely crept
Over the morning sky. But hark!
And the silence there may be heard
The drowsy chirp of the Early Bird."

To the ground he fits where he lightly sits,
Then hops with a movement gay—
"Cheep-cheep, to-whit!" and he flaps his wings—
"Oh, I am the Early Bird," he sings—
And also "To-in-ray!"
But, though he carols it through and through,
His joyful warble does not ring true.

Lo! a twig thistles beneath "his eyes
O a sudden appears to quiver."
But the bird was wobbly on his feet
A fat, duncy sound that "To-in-ray!"
The voice of the Early Worm!
And the glum old man, who had been so
At the thought of the coming tragedy.

Miscellaneous.

THE BETTER WAY.
"Louise!" "Yes, Auntie." "Where is Bob Hunter?" "He has gone home."
"So early. Why did he go?"
"He had letters to write, he said."
The old woman glanced at the girl, anxiously; her eyes were dim, but she fancied that Louise looked as if she was being crying.

"My dear," she said softly, "Bob is only a man—and you wouldn't let any sense of duty stand between you?"
The girl flushed deeply, and turned her lovely face toward her questioner.
"No, auntie, don't worry, it isn't a question of duty."

"I thought perhaps—Bob is so close he would object to me, and I wouldn't not for the world, keep you apart. The poorhouse has no terrors for me—not if it makes you happy."

"You have a queer notion of what would make me happy. No, you are all I have left, and we'll 'bide a wee together.'"
And the girl pressed her soft cheek against the old and wrinkled.

"It's hard," murmured the old aunt.
"First there was the old father and mother who nursed so long, and now there's me—and he's likely to be as ever. He'll be rich, some day."

"Yes," said the girl, quietly, "I know it. He's made of the stuff that produces rich men. Let us forget him, for he is not of our world."

"But I hope," persisted the old woman sadly, "that he might lift you at least, up to his world. You work so hard, you are only a girl. Your life ought to have been so different."

"His world is not above mine," exclaimed Louise earnestly, "it is far below. I do not care to step down.
Never mention this again, auntie,
please."

But when the winter of snow and rain set in, and Louise had to plod back forth a mile through the storm to the little millinery store, where she was said to be, she would go where she belonged.

"Where she belonged!" repeated the
rich man in a tone of voice that made
the girl's eyes sparkle.
"Here is your money; take it, and
forget you ever saw me."

"Thank you," said the maid, smiling
joyously. "You are very kind."
"Very kind! Do the walls take up the words and echo and re-echo them?
Kind, very kind! Him; kind?"
He sat for an hour with closed eyes and compressed lips, then, as the shades of evening stole around, he passed out and sought none more the matron of the county infirmary.

"It is not the hour for visitors," she said crossly.
When he explained that he must see one of the inmates privately, and tendered another five-dollar bill, he was quickly admitted.

And lastly a fine large building lately erected for the county poor.
Bob did not care a copper cent to be shown any of these affairs, but he had his own reasons for being civil, hence he permitted himself to be dragged hither and thither and at last actually found himself inside the handsome new post-house.

"The matron will show us through,"
said the obsequious friend. "Who knows but you may run across some of your old acquaintances," he added, with a light laugh.

In one of the large halls they passed a woman bending over a little child, who was sobbing bitterly. The woman sat in a low armchair, and her face was hidden, but the mass of brown hair rolled in a knot at the nape of her neck was heavily streaked with gray.

"Get out of the room, Jimmy," said
the matron. "You are always getting hurt!" then turning to the woman, she said, "Have you finished the shirts?"
The woman raised her head and replied softly that she had. The sunlight streaming in through the window brought her head and face and slight form into bold relief.

He saw her plainly, her voice had betrayed her even before he had known or guessed her identity. Yes, it was Louise, older, frailer, helpless and a beggar, not, not exactly that, for it seemed even here she was a toiler as of old.

"My God!" he thought, "how long has she been here?"
But they hurried him on, and when once more in the open air he felt he had reached a new world. He was never so near a fainting fit in his life.

"Are you ill, Mr. Hunter?" inquired more than one of the matron's friends.
"A little," he replied. "I think I will go to my room at the hotel and rest till supper."

But no sooner did he find himself
alone than he sent for one of the maids,
a girl that he knew had always lived in the place.

"Mary," said he, "I want to ask you a few questions, and you're not to tell any one a thing I shall say. If I make you present of five dollars, do you think you can hold your tongue?"

Mary tossed her head and eyed the five-dollar bill.
"I can tell the truth without being paid. As for telling anything else, no money could make me do that."

"Very well, my girl, I only want the truth. When was Louise Upton taken
to—?"
He did not finish, something seemed to choke back the word.

The girl's eyes opened and grew round as she listened. She remembered the hearing her granny tell that Louise Upton had once had a lover who had gone away and grown rich. Could it be this was he?

"Only a year ago," she answered aloud, pitying the man she saw and really suffering. "She worked as long as she could, but she was rheumatism crippled her feet and she could not run
a machine, then her hands were bad, too, and—there wasn't any one to take care of her, so she asked to be put below."

"How long has her aunt been dead?"
"Her aunt? Oh, I can just remember her; about fifteen years, I think. But a nicer, sweeter lady than Miss Louise couldn't be found. Lots of us cried and would have helped her, but she said no, she would go where she belonged."

"Where she belonged!" repeated the
rich man in a tone of voice that made
the girl's eyes sparkle.
"Here is your money; take it, and
forget you ever saw me."

"Thank you," said the maid, smiling
joyously. "You are very kind."

"Of course there's a better way—that is, if you don't hate me after all, which do you choose?"
The cold and cheerless room seemed to change to one of radiant splendor, when he bent over to hear her low reply:
"I have always tried to choose 'the better way.'"

How She Killed Them.

A bride who began housekeeping in a New York city apartment a few weeks ago had considerable trouble with roaches. They got into everything. The bride was in distraction.
But when her husband got home from his office one night he found the bride beaming with joy.

"I have fixed it," she cried, hardly waiting for the man to take off his coat. "I have done just the brightest thing! I have got rid of them, or, at least, some of them."
"Them?" Who?" demanded the husband.

"Why, the roaches, of course," replied the bride, leading the way to the kitchen.
There in the center of a table was a big heap of dead roaches. They were mixed in with a brown powder.
"You got some kind of roach poison,
I see, commented the husband. "It works all right, does it?"

"I'm glad," he said. "I just put a little heap of it there and it killed all of those right away. But it took me a long time to catch them."
"Catch them?"

"Of course. You see, you put some of this powder on a table. Then you catch the bugs and put them into it.
It kills most of them right away, but some try to run away and then you have to hold them tight in it."

"I see," said the husband, and he walked away without another word.
But, but, he had been married only a very few weeks.—New York Sun.

Ask M. Walsh.

"Ask M. Walsh," is the stock saying at the bureau of navigation in the Navy Department when anything is missing or hard to find; and as is usual with stock sayings there is a story behind it, says the New York Times. One day
the bureau sent a telegram to the commandant of a certain navy yard instructing him about an important matter, and ordering him to acknowledge receipt of the instructions by wire. There was no answer, but several days after the acknowledgment was received by mail.
Admiral Cresswell, the chief of the bureau, was indignant, and a hot message was sent to the commandant, demanding to know why he had not obeyed the order of the department on such an important matter. Back came a pretty tart reply, announcing that the telegram had been sent promptly on receipt of the instructions.

The bureau instituted a search, and finally found that a telegram had been sent through the Western Union to Actng Secretary Hackett's office, and that by "M. Walsh." No such man was known, and no one could be found who knew him. Finally Mr. Hackett was appealed to.

"Why, yes," said he, "that's my sounding name."
Then Mr. Hackett was adjured to call up his coachman on the telephone and solve the mystery. He rang up his house and directed that "Mike"
be summoned to the phone.

"Mike," said he, "have you any telegram for me?"
"No, sir," was the answer. "Hold on—faith, mabe I have. Wait till I search me coat."

Mr. Hackett held the 'phone, and presently Mike's voice said: "Hello!
Is that you, sir? Yes, I found a telegram. It came from three weeks ago."
It was the commandant's telegram.
Now "M. Walsh" is the department synonym for disappearance or mystery.

Bottling the Ocean.

A physician who has made a study of mineral waters says that it is wonderful that no one has thought of bottling the waters of the Pacific ocean and selling the fluid for mineral water. He is of the opinion that it is of far greater medicinal value than most of the so-called mineral water sold in the stores.

"The water of the Pacific," said he,
"contains some of the most wholesome
mineral salts, and has a decided medical value. Some of my patients keep it on hand and profess to obtain great benefit from its use. One of these men gets the water several miles off shore,
and at high tide, so as to be reasonably sure that it is free from pollution. He bottles it in good-sized demijohns and lets it ripen, such as the famous Juniper water of the Dismal swamp is ripened for carrying to sea on vessels making long voyages."

"When you take out the cork the whole household knows it, but after a while the water is ready for use. I thoroughly like it, and if I were in the habit of doing the things which lead men to drinking mineral water before breakfast, I think I would prefer plain Pacific ocean water to a good many that I could name which sell at fancy prices.
I have an idea that the first man who puts up pure sea water and sells it will make a good thing out of it. He will have to put it up in an attractive form to get the attention of the public, and he will make a handsome fortune before competitors can cut in, but there can be no trust on sea water."—Clarence E. Edwards in Sunset Magazine for April.

New York Fashions.

A millinery shop window is now a curious sight; exaggerations of all kinds and exquisite creations are so arranged that almost startling contrasts are the result. A Napoleon shape in plumage, a shape with an outline of tiny rose buds at back and front, (intended for a very young person) is next an immense black lace straw, with a high crown, and two gorgeous ostrich plumes. Then a large sailor hat, with crown of the richest colored silk and lace brim has for its neighbor a jet toque with white ostrich plume. A green straw, trimmed with white lilacs, is near a large Milan straw, the brim bent in three curves which are filled in with large roses and foliage.

OSTRICH PLUMES
were never more important, their graceful undulations doing away to some extent with the absurdities of hats, designed to be conspicuous. Yet yet is also a factor in millinery, particularly in the "high back" effects, where it is combined with flowers of several kinds. Large roses are well adapted to shapes turning up at one side, or forming the centre of a flat crown of flowers.

The position of the ostrich plume style hats is varied. Some tilt over the face, especially the "high back" shapes, others perch on the pompadour roll, then again the large sailor is worn quite flat on the head.

THAT BEAUTIFUL ACCESSORY

the parasol now comes with renewed beauty and variety. Myriads of plain silk parasols in different styles, are suitable to the shirt-waist suit, the novelty however is the "suit-case parasol," joined in the handle, which is certainly a great convenience.
Checked parasols with flowered silk borders are in keeping with the present fashions, and one style of elegant plain silk parasols have cut jet head steel bead handles, some being finished with a large knob.

THE LINGERIE PARASOLS

while affording no genuine protection, are very pretty, and range from those of simple muslin edged with embroidery or eyelet work, to the hand-embroided one, with insertions of real lace. These are the most popular, and the most useful. One of the most interesting of the category, and hand-painting or colored embroidery on each gore or in a wreath around the parasol, are usually a beautiful blending of delicate tints. Gathered tucks of blue or pink chiffon, a little more than an inch apart, form an entire parasol, remarkable for its softness and beauty.

LINEN GOWNS AND SUITS

far from showing the decline of favor prophesied on account of the longevity of its fashionable reign, linen is to be the craze in gowns, waists, suits, coats and embroideries. The gowns are of irresistible charm in their latest development. Embroidery in heavy hand work, open, eyelet work, Irish crochet or linen lace are used freely for their embellishment, and they are often as costly as they are beautiful. Linen tulle is one of the latest varieties in shirt-waist style. Seen at a recent opening was a linen suit, the blous-e, blue shade, open at the neck, with a half-length coat open in front and a circular skirt. The edges of the entire costume including the skirt were hand-embroidered with the same shade of blue.

Lucy Carter.

Raymond Hitchcock, of "The Yankee Consult" company, is one of those gentlemen who tries to be polite to everybody, and the other day when he sat down in a street car in Toronto he hit side of an elderly-looking man, Hitchcock said:
"Pardon day, isn't it?"
"Yes?" responded the old man, with his hand to his ear.
"I said it was a pleasant day."
"What say?"
"I simply said it was a pleasant day."

Poetry.
Easter.
M. G. BISHOP.
Christ came and went but he is with us still.
He closer draws us years come in between.
That time of torture on the tragic hill
And this new time through fragrant lilacs seen.
And so in death, which takes our friend away.
The soul draws nearer as the body dies;
And our dead friend forever holds his way.
While living friends are met with doubting eyes.
Faith comes with death, as death comes with life,
And so, through death, our exaltation comes.
When, looking upward from a pulsing strife
We hear the soul's voice thence the life is dumb.

Miscellany.
TWO EASTER BONNETS.
"Oh, Henry," said Mr. Montague's wife, as she came from the dining-room and quietly removed the paper he was reading from his hands, "how long have you carried this letter in your pocket?" "What letter?"—that?
—why, the one that came yesterday. You can see the date that is stamped upon the envelope."
"Well, I didn't know. You are very careless—you know you are. That letter came from Auntie—"
"What about this other?" he skillfully interrupted. "It's from Jack, I see." He reached for his paper with a movement at once diplomatic and tenacious.
"That's exactly what I came to tell you about. It's very thoughtful of him, I know, but—well, we'll see what you think. He writes," she said, consulting the letter, "I met your one-time admirer—No, that isn't the part. Here it is, 'Mammy dear, I want you to let me get you an Easter bonnet, here in the city. Some stunner in the shops—knock the spots off anything you can get in Mayfield. It begins to look as if I won't be able to get away from the college, and I'd like to have some sort of a share in the festive season there at home. Leave it to me, will you, Mammy?—and I'll rig you out on time in a crystallized dream."
"First, what does he mean by 'knockoff the spots'?" she inquired. "I suppose that's just an expression of his, however. Now, what do you think?"
"I think it is," said Henry, who was looking furtively at his paper; "I guess that's it."
"Henry Montague, you haven't heard a word," she took the paper and put it behind her. "I mean, that do you think of his plan?"
"Good Scheme. Best I've heard of.
Let him get the contraption there by all means. There I refer to the bonnet, though. I don't feel sure. I have some—well, some very unusual effects in the city. I think perhaps you'd avoid unpleasant complications, and have something new to Mayfield to wear. Yes, let him do it. And he reached for his paper—and failed to get it.

"I believe I will. Of course, I always like to select, but I said last year that I'd never, never tread at Miss Le Fevre's mismanagement should have perished two such friends—but I was surprised at Helen—at Mrs. Kapu-lette—to think she'd wear a bonnet that she must have known was mine, or at least not the one she had ordered."
"Did you wear—wear—hers?" said
he, with an imitation yawn.
"Why, of course! Now, what a question! I had to wear something—I couldn't order another then. Henry, you are positively foolish at times. I remember I said to Miss Le Fevre, when I picked it out—"
"Yes, I remember the story," interrupted her husband, consulting his watch and starting to arise.
"Well," said she, as she pushed him back gently to his seat, "you always forget that lavender and pink are positively hideous on me, and why in the world Mrs. Kapulet—couldn't have managed to send my bonnet home when she found the mistake had been made—"
"Did she know it was yours?" asked Henry, beginning to be rather more insistently sarcastic than enthusiastic about this off-repeated tale; "did she go along when you gave the order?"
"No; you know she didn't! I meant to give her a pleasant surprise—and that was her way of receiving my effort.
Your questions are childish, Henry.
She might have guessed that 'canary'
was exactly my taste—indeed, what any one with my taste and complexion would be sure to select—and Miss Le Fevre's girl—"
"There—there! Billings out at the gate. Good-by, my dear. Give Jack my love when you write—sorry he can't be up for Easter. Good-by." Mr.
Montague clapped his hat on his head, saluted his wife, made a grab for his cane and departed.

Then Mrs. Montague sat down to think of the trials of that time, a little less than a year before. There never had been in the world, she thought, such a long and beautiful friendship as that between herself and Helen Kapu-lette. To think that after having gone to the same identical school together—
the best of chums—they were married the very same day—to travel in separate directions later, to be sure—and both had moved to Mayfield at last to live.
Mrs. Montague recalled every detail of her order for that fatal Easter bonnet;
exactly that delicate shade of yellow,
and what the trimmings were—and, everything. Then the change she had ordered; the exasperating slowness and stupidity of Miss Le Fevre; the crazed despair, when, that Saturday night she returned so late from calling with Helen,
to find that her bonnet had not yet arrived. And then that awful time on Easter morning, before the girl came weakly up the steps and handed in the wrong bonnet—a bonnet she had never seen before—a horrid pink—more of a thing in lavender and pink, which she had to wear or stay at home—a new blue silk and all.

She wouldn't have believed that Helen could have worn her own very bonnet—and then be so hateful. She wondered if they ever would speak to each other again. No, she didn't believe they would; she didn't believe that Helen was half so ready to forget and forgive as she. Well, she would just let Jack get the bonnet in the city

this year, and let the people of Mayfield stare if they wished.
So at length she arose and went to her desk to write to her grown-up "boy."
In the course of time, and several days before Easter, the bonnet from the great metropolis arrived along with a note from Jack deploring the fact that he could not have carried it home in person. It was really a jewel, a dainty creation of airy, graceful feathers on a moose-green frame and subdued with violet tints that were poised with an exquisite grace, where they nodded and smiled and seemed to be tossing the sweetest of perfume kisses to all who were gracious enough to behold.
But Easter morning! Ah, how it brightly outshined all other days of the year. The sun shone warmly from a flawless sky of turquoise hue; the trees were freshest, fairest emerald leaves, or pearl and ruby blossoms; the grass was asparisk with diamond dew, and the birds were chorusing in anthems as clear—what their voices meant, it was tinkle rung from pebbles by the brook.
Mr. and Mrs. Montague not only were in harmony with all the scene, but were really a part and parcel of it, as, with faces gay with smiles, they slowly walked the way to church. The bells had never sounded half so musical and lively bright—that is, except on one occasion, to which, indeed, Mr. Montague was moved now to allude.
"Just such a morning as this," said
he, with a buoyancy in his voice, "that we went to the chapel—so many, and yet it seems so very far away now.
What a day that was! And what a lot of sunshine we have had ever since!"
"Oh, yes! And didn't the girls look pretty—and Helen—Mrs. Kapu-lette?"
"I'd call her Helen—wouldn't you,
Fanny—to-day? Wasn't it odd that Helen should have been the one to introduce us? What a lively pair you used to make—you two!"
A glow had come in the cheek of Mrs. Montague and an extra brightness in her eyes. She felt a yearning toward the girl who had been her chum—the tall young lady who had found her a mate—the matronly woman whom long she had loved.
"I wish I could see her," she mused aloud; "but I know she wouldn't meet—"
"What way, my dear?" said her husband, when she paused. "What do you know—about whom? Who wouldn't meet with whom?"
"I was just thinking what a lovely bonnet that is on that lady ahead?"
She chatted along admiringly—as well
she might, having really the prettiest bonnet on parade—but her under-current of thought was still of Helen, though she tried to keep her feet on the ground and her husband with her.
Up the steps of the miniature cathedral the brilliant throng of Mayfield was swarming, faces turned—amid the gayety of dancing flames and blooms that courted from bonnet to bonnet—toward what their highlanders had for feet of eight or ten British washings or created to grace the happy occasion.
Within, as Mrs. and Mr. Montague walked calmly up the aisle, the organ was pealing exultantly, pouring forth its thousand voices of praise in an exuberant and swelling river of hymns, as if itself were the fountain of melodies divine.
They took their seats, and reached,
like children, each for the hand of the other, to exchange a gentle pressure.
No sooner had Mrs. Montague commenced a rapid survey of the congregation, than her glance went flitting from one exotic to another, like a butterfly in clover—then she found herself, abruptly, looking in the face and at the bonnet of Mrs. Kapulet.

And Helen in return was looking at her and fancy, the gaze of each was suddenly held transfixed.
Well might the old-time friends open eyes of amazement—their bonnets were counterparts—precise reproductions—
each of the other: the same moss green, the same spray of feathers, airy and fluffy, the same mass of violet, and dancing and smiling and tossing their perme kisses across the aisle and seats of the chancel.
Both in confusion at last were glad to divert their eyes to the hymn books, held before the pews; but neither was reading, nor praying, nor seeing a thing but the twin of her bonnet, and wondering with might and main how this singular duplication had been made possible.
Mrs. Kapulet was guilty of stealing a glance at the sides of her seat.
Mrs. Montague was timidly attempting a similar sortie. The glances met and fell again to the books. The service commenced, but nothing was heard or observed, except in a dim, uncertain, mechanical manner, by the two. They were quite enough engrossed with attempts to flank the enemy.
In the midst of the battle of glances,
which had gone so far that each was now feeling singularly humorous and amused, their gaze was focused on a striking pair of young people gliding silently by and up the aisle side by side.
They were Julia Kapulet, the daughter of Helen, and John Henry Montague, the son of Fanny. And they sat in a row together and sang from a single book, their voices clear and sweet.

Now began, in the breasts of two indignant and admiring mothers, a conflict of emotions and a struggle so intense that music, sermon, songs and prayers, and all the people but themselves, were merged in a shadowy dream of unreality, to say no word of the puzzle in their brains. Then, to add to their fantasy of thought and to set them whirling in a wider field of conjecture, those "youngsters," making a game of arranging the overcoat of Jack in their seat, at the end of a hymn, turned only about and smiled
the gayest, most knowing of smiles in the wondering faces of their parents, doing first the honor to one and then with utter impartiality to the other.
The mothers were more than ever amazed; but not to say that each began to entertain suspicions of something unusual between their "children" would certainly be to do no justice at all to that other sense in womankind,

which is duly acknowledged under the explanation that all possess an intuitive faculty of "finding things out."
Slowly, very slowly, the face of Mrs.
Montague came slowly, as if by magic,
likewise, un-exaggerated but quizzical.
Likewise, the countenance of Mrs.
Kapulet, innocent of everything but dumb, eloquent inquiry, turned deliberately about to that of her friend.
Their glances met without a quiver;
they scanned each other's expression for light on the mystery; then, playing through the eyes of each, came gleams of mischievous merriment and sparks of old-time, and over the face of each a flash of color from the heart. In a second they were smiling in spite of all they could do, while the blossoms on their bonnets insisted on nodding and bobbing across the space intervening in a way that was nothing short of the veriest fellowship and sweet familiarity.
For Helen and Fanny the Easter service was a dream of comely smiling faces and waddings of the past and the future, but the whole was far too long.
They would fain awake and span the gulf between—and yet were vaguely in doubt to think of what they would say.
When at last, to the peals of a glorious postlude, the congregation turned move to the door in calm procession, young Jack and the blushing Julia came tripping down the aisle in time to take their respective mothers by the arm and halt them face to face in the vestibule.
"We came from town to surprise you both," said Jack, "and—ahem—to—ask you for each other. I want Julia and Julia wants me, and it was for that reason we sent the bonnets."
And the bonnet, being twins, resisting each other no longer, came nearer and nearer together, till at length the noddling violets on either one leaned forward and commingled lovingly with those upon the other—Ella Sterling

From the Braintree Observer.
A Glimpse of Europe.
The following was written by Chester S. Moore and William R. Carver young men of Brockton who have spent nearly two years sightseeing in Europe.
We thought their many months in Europe might yield a portion of their most interesting experience.—Eds.
We had just finished school and were undecided what to do. "Why not knock around a little and see something of the world before setting down?" said Bill, and so we started. Two months later found us in Southampton, with its historic Bar-bate, the old entrance of the walled town of the thirteenth century,
still blocking the principal thoroughfare.
It is a three-arched gate of massive porphyry, with the old portcullis and drawbridge still remaining. Along the western shore the "Old Walls" are still standing with the parapets and turrets for the archers and slingers. Nearby is a statue of Alfred I, erected in 1875, with its inscription written in the old English of that period.
We soon secured positions on an American yacht and set sail for Gibraltar, and after a rough passage across the ever stormy Bay of Biscay arrived safely. It was only two or three days before the danger Bank episode and a fleet of eight or ten British warships, there were coaling and preparing for whatever might happen if the Russians reached there. During the night the search lights were playing over the harbor incessantly, the patrol boats were out, all the coast artillery was ready to open fire at a moment's notice.
The next day we landed and wandered through the narrow streets, with their quaint little Moorish shops, silks, broaderies, lace, and tobacco heaped up and piled around with no regard to order or appearance. It was our first sight of an Oriental market place,
the women squatting on the ground with baskets of fruits, vegetables, flowers piled around them. As in all eastern countries the first price asked is far above the value and one must hicker and bargain and finally after getting the price quartered, you can rest assured that you have paid two or three times
the value.
One meets an ever changing throng,
Moors in their turbans and robes, pictureque at a distance but at close sight
the dirt robe of all charm, mingled with Spanish, French, English and crowds of soldiers. But we stayed only one day in Gibralt and were soon steaming up the blue waters of the Mediterranean, a beautiful day, warm, calm it left nothing to be desired, and we reached the Gulf of Lyons and that maintained its reputation by blowing a gale. We had to put into Toulon overnight for a few weeks, safe and sound.
Menton is a very pretty little place, in the midst of the Maritime Alps and on the border of France and Italy. The "Old City" still retains the narrow streets and high buildings, of an earlier period. It is dirty and roughly paved, interesting only because it is old.
The people are plainly dressed, filthy,
and disgusting, the women especially wrinkled and bent with work carrying paniers upon their heads. The more modern part is laid out in squares, and gardens. The buildings are larger, streets wider, all having the appearance of a modern European city. Here we found the fashionable hotels and villas of the winter visitors. Along the shore runs a beautiful promenade with its gardens and band stands where the orchestra plays every afternoon. Here one has the beautiful view of the Mediterranean, the coast winding away into the promontories of Cape Martin on one side and the Italian peak Bordighera on the other. Here the fashionable residents come every afternoon to enjoy the music and the warm sunshine.
There are many attractive drives up into the mountains among the quaint hamlets that still remain.

After a brief stay in Menton we visited Genoa for a few days. The principal object of interest is its cemetery, considered the finest in the world. It is most artistically laid out. The statuary is the finest that can be found outside the museums and private collections.

The gendarmes or police present a most striking appearance, wearing Prince Albert coats, silk hats, white gloves and gaiters and carrying canes.
Here we visited the house in which Christopher Columbus was born. It was in the lower quarter of the town, preserving an altogether disappointing appearance. We soon returned to Men-ton, where we made haste to visit the famous Casino of Monte Carlo, probably the best known town in France outside of Paris. On leaving the train one ascends a long flight of marble stairs with beautiful statues set in little niches
into the most beautiful of gardens;
palms shading long secluded walks,
with garden seats and ideal lovers'
overlooking cliffs of rocks, with the blue waters of the Mediterranean foaming and churning at the foot, making a fringe of white on the borders of the blue sea, which stretches to the horizon.
Elaborately designed flower-beds, marble fountains set with rose bushes, acres of gardens through which one approaches the Casino. It is a magnificent building, highly ornamented with bas-reliefs, busts and statues of every description. On the stairs are liveried attendants. Passing these one enters the Casino proper. Speaking of the Casino, it is a building which has to obtain a Carte de jeu, having this one has the freedom of the Casino and enters the conversation hall, an oblong shaped room, mosaic floor, arched ceiling, decorated by the best artists of modern Europe, heavy pillars of colored marble divide the room, the Salle de Jeu on the right and the cloak room and ladies room on the left. In the Salle de Jeu are the tables, roulette and Trente et Quatre, with the attendants, all uniformed, the umpire on an elevated seat to overlook the play the croupiers at each end with a pile of gold before them and the roulette croupier. That bank literally "takes in the shakels."
Much is written in novels of greed and despair on the faces around the tables,
but we found only a well dressed collect of throng of what Bernard Shaw calls the "L. C. C."
In the sumptuously furnished music room a stringed orchestra of seventy pieces, one of the finest in all Europe, plays every afternoon and evening. Altogether Monte Carlo with its beautiful climate, fine scenery, magnificent hotels and charming villas is an ideal place to pass a winter. If one does not like the Casino there are theatres, operas, dances, receptions, drives, sails, pigeon-shooting, motor-boating, for there is never a lack of entertainment.

Cruelty to Children.
The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children was incorporated in 1878, and since that time it has dealt with cases involving over 100,000 ill-treated, destitute, and neglected children. These cases are reported to the Society by the police,
through the district officers, by those engaged in the management of the schools,
by friends and neighbors, and by charitable institutions.
The General Office of the Society are in Boston. Still, through its five special agents and two hundred local agents throughout the State, the Society is constantly on the alert. It stands ready, at any time, to investigate in any place any case brought to its attention by any one.
If a case is bad enough to warrant
such action, it is taken into court,
and, if the judge so decides, the child is removed from the home, and placed in a good home, where it may have a fair chance to grow up and become an honorable and law-abiding member of the community.
Besides relieving the immediate suffering of the child, the Society is a great benefit to the State, since it takes from the streets and from the homes of wretched and immoral surroundings children who would almost beyond question grow up to be public characters, paupers, vagrants, and criminals,
and by placing them in good surroundings gives them an opportunity to become the better of their present conditions instead of burdens to the community.
No one who once becomes interested in the work of the Society ever questions the value of the work it is trying to accomplish, but its difficulty in obtaining adequate financial support lies in the fact that so few people realize the terrible condition of misery or the suffering in which hundreds and thousands of children are growing up in this State today.
It is not an exaggerated fact that at this very day and hour, in this rich and intelligent commonwealth, thousands of children are growing to maturity
under conditions which, if no saving agency intervenes, must almost inevitably result in manhood and womanhood with souls blackened, with minds dwarfed and distorted, and with bodies brutalized, all through the cru

The Quincy Patriot.

Sturtevant-Emery.

Thursday evening, at half past seven, surrounded by the immediate family relatives and friends, Miss Florence Emery, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Emery, and Mr. Lawrence Sturtevant, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Sturtevant, were united in marriage at the home of the bride, by Rev. Ellery Channing Butler of First Church. The bride was attended, and was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Joseph L. Sturtevant, brother of the groom was best man.

From eight until ten o'clock a large reception was held for which over six hundred invitations had been sent out. The guests were ushered by E. L. Sturtevant of Brookline, C. A. Howard, Jr., Dr. F. R. Burke, Carl C. Lane of Quincy, C. Eaton Pierce of Wollaston and F. S. Allyn of South Framingham. The young people were assisted in receiving their friends by their parents.

Mrs. Emery's gown was of black chiffon over white silk, with point lace garniture. Mrs. Sturtevant wore a beautiful gown of pearl grey broadcloth and the bride was lovely in an ivory white Liberty satin, which was made. The bride veil was of tulle. She carried a large bouquet of lilies of the valley, and wore a beautiful pin, a gift from the groom.

Pool's orchestra played continuously. The floral decorations were simple; green and white being the color scheme, asparagus vine, palms, white lilies and azaleas backed the stairway, and mantels. In the dining-room, the same color scheme was carried out, white carnations and green shaded candelabra making an effective decoration.

There was a wealth of beautiful presents; exquisite cut glass and silver, pictures, china, bric-a-brac, jewelry, several checks, in fact most everything that heart could desire.

At the close of the reception at ten o'clock the young people simply walked out of the side door, into a waiting carriage and were off almost before their friends realized what they were doing, but bags of confetti were handy and they received a liberal shower of it before they got away.

Mr. and Mrs. Sturtevant are to spend their honeymoon at Virginia Hot Springs and Old Point Comfort, returning to Quincy in May, when they will be at home to friends after June first, at 8 Adams street.

Easter Programs.

The Easter programs of several of the Quincy churches are given below, and others will appear in the Saturday eight-page Ledger, which will be an Easter number with an Easter story, Easter poem, and other Easter columns.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Easter will be observed in Christ church as follows:

Early celebration of the holy communion with the singing of Easter carols by the choir.

Morning prayer, holy communion and sermon at 7:30 A. M.

Sunday school service at 9 A. M.

Evening prayer and address at 7 o'clock.

The special music of the day will be: Prelude, "Tollite Hostias," Saint Simeon, Anthem, "As it Began to Dawn," Vincent de Paul, "Callings," Calkins, Holy Communion Service, Magnificat and nine dimittis, Criswell's Postlude, Fairman, Lemmens.

W. E. Williams, organist, and Rev. L. Wheeler, organist and choirmaster.

FIRST CHURCH.

The Sunday school will hold an Easter concert in the Unitarian church on Sunday at 4 P. M. There will be special Easter music under the direction of Mrs. Hunting, selections from the scholars and an Easter story. Each member of the school will receive a potted plant. It is hoped the members of the church will join with the school by their attendance in large numbers.

The Young People's Religious Union will have a special musical evening on Sunday in the chapel at 7 o'clock.

Every effort is being made to make a varied and interesting program and a special large attendance is desired. All are cordially invited.

BETHANY CHURCH.

The Easter theme of Rev. E. N. Hardy on Sunday morning will be: "Foreglean the life immortal."

The Easter music will be:

Anthem, "Now is Christ Risen," Nicholas Solo, "Jesus Lives," Martini.

Anthem, "Hail Him Lord and Leader," Martini Solo, "He is not here for he is risen," E. Broome.

Quartet, "At the Sepulchre," Beckman.

Anthem, "Awake thou that sleepest," Martini.

A quartet consisting of Mrs. Page, soprano; Miss Young, contralto; Mr. Beale, tenor; and Mr. Hayden, bass, will assist the chorists. Mr. Frederick H. Johnson is organist, and Mr. Melville violinist.

A carefully prepared and interesting Easter concert at 7:30, entitled "Easter Lilies."

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

"The Easter Message" will be the subject of Rev. Charles H. Emmons at the morning service on Easter Sunday at the Universalist church. The musical program will include:

Organ voluntary.

Vocal Selection, from "The Messiah," "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," Mrs. Elvira Ewell.

Response, "The Day of Resurrection," Mrs. Daisy Morris.

Easter Hymn, "Lift up your glad voices in triumph on high," Hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," Postlude, Mrs. F. F. Cutter, organist.

The decorations will be in charge of the Home committee. Mrs. Hubbard, Mrs. Frank Hubbard and Mrs. Blake. The public is cordially invited to attend the services of the day.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

"The Silent Lamb of God" will be Rev. W. B. Barr's subject at the United Presbyterian church Easter morning.

At the Easter service at 7 P. M., the theme will be: "Our underlying hope through the resurrection." The choir will be assisted by a bass and a tenor from Boston, and there will be a special music.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

Morning service at 10:30, when a sermon will be preached by the pastor on the resurrection. In the evening the ninth of the present series which has attracted so much interest will be delivered.

The soloist at these services will be Mrs. T. D. Milne. The Granite City Male Quartette will also sing. The Sabbath school will meet at 12 M. The Y. P. S. C. E. at 6 P. M. All seats free. Strangers are cordially welcomed.

REVEREND A. E. WHITE, A RECENT PASTOR OF THE UNIVERSALIST CHURCH, IS SERIOUSLY ILL, HAVING HAD A STROKE OF APPOXY AT METHUEN.

CITY BRIEFS.

Compositors are wanted at the Daily Ledger office.

Everything is on the move at the head of Granite street.

Mr. and Mrs. John O. Hall, Jr., are in Quincy for a few days.

L. O. Richardson left Saturday for Provincetown where he will make his future home.

Miss Madeleine Fish of the Quincy High school is spending the spring vacation at Nantucket.

Mrs. E. H. Pennington of Wintthrop, Me., is the guest of Mrs. C. H. Pennington of Whitwell street.

Communion service follows immediately after the morning service at First church on Easter Sunday.

The street watering car arrived Saturday night and commenced to make its daily rounds on Sunday.

Nothing was heard about the High school enlargement at the meeting of the City Council this week.

A small building to be used as a candy kitchen is being erected in the rear of Emanuel street in City Square.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Prescott of Bigelow street leave for New York tonight for the Easter holidays.

Gen. Nelson A. Miles was in town Sunday making a short call on Mrs. A. B. Packard and Mrs. Whittemore.

Miss Julia E. Underwood has gone to West Lynn and will be the guest of her sister during the Easter vacation.

P. Perkins has moved his cobble shop from Granite street to the rear of McConnell's fruit store on Hancock street.

May 19 the open date in the Quincy High term schedule has been taken up by the Mechanics Art High school at Quincy.

W. H. Winslow of Marblehead and Albert H. Winslow of Cleveland, Ohio, were guests over Sunday of F. F. Prescott.

The Massachusetts Historical society held its annual meeting last week and elected Hon. Charles Francis Adams as president.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pollock of Wollaston have moved to Bigelow street, Quincy, occupying the house with Mr. Pollock's mother.

A handsome portrait of Thomas Crane has been hung in the City Clerk's office, and the school buildings have also received portraits.

The Board of Health is getting after people who have neglected to clear up their ashes. A polite but forcible letter does the business.

Mrs. Henry T. Fernald of Newcomb street, accompanied by her daughter, is the guest of her sister and family at Melrose for a week.

The Quincy Tennis club announce tournaments for May 20, June 17, July 4 and Sept. 4. The courts were open for play on Patriots' day.

Judge Avery held an inquest on Friday on the death of Moody Scott of Quincy, who was killed by the cars at Braintree some weeks ago.

Mrs. Merton Bryant and daughter Carrie, who have been visiting relatives in this city the past week, have returned to their home in Bridgewater.

Mrs. L. C. Howson accompanied by her daughter, Marion, of Newcomb place, have been the guest of her parents at Hanover the past week.

The dance given by several young people in Atlantic Music hall, Wednesday evening, was well carried out in all details and a very successful venture.

Charles Redding, assistant engineer-man of the steamer at the Central Fire station, has resigned to accept a position with the Gamewell Fire Alarm Telegraph Co.

There was a snow squall about 9:30 A. M. Monday, which lasted for five minutes. The last fall of snow was on March 22, and the number of days of sleighing for the winter was 55.

William J. Clark of Brockton was arrested by Chief Barrett and Lieut. McKay, Saturday night, for the larceny of a bicycle at Brockton. He was later turned over to Brockton officers.

While the 5:12 train from Quincy, Sunday afternoon, was passing Crescent street, a stone struck a window on the ocean side of the car, shattering the glass. A young lady was in the seat.

Ex-Councilman Alexander W. Thompson continues seriously ill, but the family are a little more hopeful for recovery. Mrs. Thompson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Steiman Williams, are here.

A smoke taker under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club will be held at Colonial hall, April 27. J. J. Foley will give a talk on "the elements of navigation of yachts." The talk will be illustrated with stereoscopic views by Dr. R. W. Brayton.

Among the events of the year 1836 recorded in the Boston Almanac for 1836 (Vol. 1, No. 1) was one in which Quincy shined. Jan. 13, the first of the granite columns for the new court house was brought from Quincy by 65 oxen and 10 horses. Weight about fifty tons.

Great sport was had on Monday at the Y. M. C. A. building, when the South Quincy members met and defeated the members from West Quincy in an impromptu bowling match.

In the first match with five men on each team the scores were: South Quinys, 384; Quincy 354. In the second match with six men on each team the scores were: South Quinys, 474; Quincy, 464.

Invitations have been sent out by Mrs. William H. North, Mrs. Edmund F. Clark and Mrs. Howard M. North for an at home, on Tuesday, April 25, from four until six at 822 Beacon street, Brookline. This is the last of a series of receptions in honor of Mrs. Howard M. North, whose marriage took place a few months ago at her home in New York, followed by a wedding trip to Palm Beach, Florida.

A rare musical treat is in store for those who attend the sacred cantata to be given at the Wollaston Unitarian church next Tuesday evening. Dudley Buck's 40th Psalm is to be rendered by a chorus of thirty voices, assisted by ten soloists; Miss Marion Nichols, reader; Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, pianist; Miss Eugenia Hatch, organist, and Mr. Edward L. Jordan, as conductor. It will undoubtedly be the finest musical production given in Quincy this season.

the death of Senator Hoar, Senator Platt has stood as the type of statesman usually described as "of the school." He was a man of unquestioned probity and intense loyalty, and his public life, beloved by all who knew him irrespective of party, and his death is a grievous loss to the country as it is to the Senate. Atlantic Bridge Tangle.

Mayor Thompson is having a hard time trying to arrange the middle of the Atlantic bridge and it is some- what discouraging to the City govern- ment in its belief that a solution was in sight to have the bridge re- placed and thus make another set back. It was believed that the relocating of the bridge would solve the matter; that not only would it do away with the expensive grade damages but would improve the abutting property as well. Before the Sagamore street was introduced into the City Council Mayor Thompson interviewed the property owners and it was understood that the street was relocated that they would waive grade damages as their property would be improved.

The officials of the New York and New Haven and Old Colony street railway were consulted and with the understanding that there would be no grade damages, they agreed to share their proportionate part of the expense. With these assurances the order was introduced and a public hearing advertised for Monday night. Almost at the last moment the agent for one of the properties involved moved forward and withdrew his letter agreeing to waive all claim for grade damages. The result is another set back and the solution of this perplexing problem has become more so. Mayor Thompson however, is here to work upon the matter and it will be his job to see that it is not speedily settled.

Reception to Miss Underwood.

Friday evening, May 19, has been selected as the date for the reunion of Coddington school graduates and a reception. Miss Julia E. Underwood for fifty years a primary grade teacher at that school. All friends of Miss Underwood, and all former pupils of the Coddington school are invited to cooperate.

The committee feel that considerable individual work is necessary that all former pupils residing out of town may be notified of the event. They would suggest that it be an "Old Home Week gathering" to be a reunion which will be enjoyable for former residents of Quincy who had the pleasure of being Coddington pupils.

Please, therefore, extend the invitation generally. A hearty welcome will be given to all at High School hall on Friday evening, May 19.

The committee on program includes Frank E. Parlin, superintendent of schools; Miss Mary E. Dearborn, principal of the Coddington school; and Mr. T. B. Pollard, principal of the Washington school and president of the Quincy Teachers' Association.

Invitations have been extended to G. I. Aldrich, superintendent of schools at Brookline, and Herbert W. Lull, superintendent of schools at Newport, R. I., former superintendents at Quincy, to be guests; and former principals and teachers and friends of Miss Underwood will also be invited.

The State Census.

Beginning next Monday morning, May 1, the enumerators of the Massachusetts census of 1905 will begin their daily toll. The work will be done under the direction of the Massachusetts bureau of statistics of labor, by an army of men and women.

The enumerators are paid $5 for every nine hours of service. The work begins all over the state at the same time, and will be finished as rapidly as possible. Each person is assigned to a district.

Each enumerator will have three different cards, red, blue, and yellow, to be filled out, with a host of answers. The yellow card is for the family, and calls for information relating to the address, head of family, name, occupation, political condition, number of families in the family, number of males and females in the family, number of persons, number of rooms occupied, kind of house occupied, number contributing to the income, servants, etc.

The blue card is for the male, and calls for facts relating to the name, occupation, time employed, insurance, birthplace, residence, parentage, nativity of grandparents, age, color, physical condition, ability to read or write, marriage, military service, etc.

The red card for females, and in most respects similar to the blue card for males. Quincy people are advised to refresh their memories regarding family history, count the number of their children, the rooms, the furniture, and ascertain other interesting facts, so that they can be given to the enumerator as promptly as possible.

Twelve automobiles were lined up before the district court on Wednesday for exceeding the speed limit in the Blue Hills Reservation. All of them entered a plea of not-contendere, and the court sentenced them to pay fines of $20, $30, $40, $50, $60, $70, $80, $90, $100, $110, $120, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $180, $190, $200, $210, $220, $230, $240, $250, $260, $270, $280, $290, $300, $310, $320, $330, $340, $350, $360, $370, $380, $390, $400, $410, $420, $430, $440, $450, $460, $470, $480, $490, $500, $510, $520, $530, $540, $550, $560, $570, $580, $590, $600, $610, $620, $630, $640, $650, $660, $670, $680, $690, $700, $710, $720, $730, $740, $750, $760, $770, $780, $790, $800, $810, $820, $830, $840, $850, $860, $870, $880, $890, $900, $910, $920, $930, $940, $950, $960, $970, $980, $990, $1000.

There will be a baptism service Sunday evening at the Wollaston Baptist church.

Mrs. Carroll Bates and daughter Dorothy have returned from a two weeks' visit to Plymouth.

The Women's Golf Association announce a handicap tournament at the Concord links on Wednesday next, and at Wollaston May 9.

The Quincy Quarters Co. have received the contract to furnish the granite to be used in the Carnegie Institute, being erected in Pittsburg, Pa. The amount of the contract was about $50,000. All of the stone must be delivered in a few months and Manager Morgan says in order to get the job off in time it will be necessary for him to put on upwards of one hundred men at once.

The property of Berry Bros. was sold at auction by Auctioneer Johnson on Wednesday. The real estate was purchased by Mr. J. B. Corish, and the personal property by different parties. There was good lively bidding on the personal property.

A grand dance under the auspices of the St. Mary's basketball team was held in St. Mary's hall Thursday evening. The music was furnished by the band of the Quincy High School orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Morse are on their annual salmon fishing trip at Sebago Lake, Maine. Mrs. Morse landed four beauties on Monday last, catching the limit that is, five fish. The State of Maine allow to be caught in any one day, by a single person, twenty-five pounds; and there are others in Mr. Morse's party who have done the same on this trip.

The trial list for the May Civil Service of the Superior Court, with Jurisdiction, is out. It contains 28 cases. A minister show and May party will be given at St. Mary's hall next week.

Bernardo Boulter, who shot an Italian in a house on Copeland street, West Quincy, last January, was found not guilty in the Superior court at Dedham on Wednesday and discharged.

Following the umbrella exercise, emblematic of the first meeting, ice cream and cake was brought from its hiding place, where it was placed by the attacking party when the house was besieged, and no one was seen to refuse any.

After some music and singing the party broke up, having organized themselves into minaret men and women, ready to attack the next stronghold. Who will it be?

The Quincy City Hospital has recently received a bequest of two hundred dollars from the estate of the late Miss Elizabeth C. Adams. These tokens of thoughtfulness and concern for the great work done by this institution are greatly appreciated. It will be the duty of the "Board of Trustees" always to attract the consideration of those providing for disposition of their property.

Dramatics are always attractive and call out good audiences. On Tuesday evening at Colonial hall, the Manet club of Christ church gave the last dramatic entertainment in their course.

Two farces were given, "The Straw Man," which was exceedingly funny, and "April Fools." Both were acted by club members, who sustained their parts well.

Between the plays there were solos by Miss Gertrude Driscoll and Mr. Edward Sullivan, and readings by Mrs. A. G. McWilliam.

At the close there was informal dancing with Mrs. Rhine at the piano. The second session of the kindergarten is held during the regular Sunday school hour. This might be a good idea for some of the Quincy churches to adopt.

Commencing next week the barber shops will be closed on Mondays at noon.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Co-operative bank will be held next Wednesday evening. Shares in a new series are now on sale.

Mrs. A. H. Gilson, who is well known for her executive ability, will have entire charge of the supper the opening evening of the Colonial fair fete, May fourth.

D. E. Wadsworth & Co. are making a specialty of their infant department, where everything in the way of dainty dresses, coats, bonnets, etc., can be purchased.

The Quincy Charitable Society has come into possession of the legacy of $10,000 from the estate of the late Elias A. Perkins. Only the income will be expended annually.

Clerk Churchill and Clerk Adams part shared congratulations at the district court yesterday, both becoming fathers of bouncing baby girls on Thursday.

Those having Herald coupons for Miss Underwood, which they intend to forward to the Daily Ledger office, are requested to do so weekly, as the contest is drawing to a close, and it is desirable to know where we stand.

People on the 4.25 train from Boston Thursday afternoon had quite a scare as the train neared the Quincy station. A rock crashed through the car-window and the glass was shattered over some of the passengers. The Quincy officers were notified and they went in search of the guilty parties.

Several from Quincy attended the eleventh annual banquet and ladies' night of the New England Association of Opticians at the American House, Boston, on Tuesday evening. Eben Hardy, of Wollaston, is president, William L. Thomas, of Quincy, vice president, and Walter W. Slade, the treasurer. The last two served on the reception committee. About seventy-five attended. A vaudeville entertainment was provided, and it was a joyous event.

In the Massachusetts House on Thursday the committee on street railways reported a bill to incorporate the Quincy & Fall River Bicycle Electric Railway Company with a capital stock of $5,000,000 and authority to operate a bicycle railway between Boston and Fall River. This is the well known Moody Boynton proposition. The following members are recorded against the bill: Senators Cummings and Burns and Representatives Hannan, Quinlan, Phillips and Willington.

Spring's Allurements.

E. WESLON CLARK.

When Spring comes bounding o'er the hills,
The little brooks releasing,
To bubble forth in joyful mirth,
Their music sweet, unceasing,
When winds are soft and gentle,
And night is gently falling,
And all the earth seems listening,
To hear, should God be calling,
Then, let me leave your music halls,
Your concert-givers, entrancing,
To seek my song in wooded dells,
Where Nature's brooks are dancing.
O whisp'ring winds of Springtime's eve!
O brooks, 'neath grasses singing!
Your wondrous tales, your songs of cheer
Are still retirement bringing.
For oft, when breaks the busy day,
Or night shuts in its gloom,
I listen for your plaintive notes,
I hear your simple tune.
And oft I fly on fancy's wings,
In lone imagination,
And lose myself and all world
In your sweet incantation.

Notes and Comments.

—Millionaire Nelson of St. Louis, declares that his wealth is a burden to him. Why does he not give some of it away, and see how happy he can make those around him?

—Relative to an anti-divorce law Miss Susan B. Anthony says: "I do not consider divorce an evil by any means. It is just as much a refuge for women married to brutal men as Canada was once a refuge from brutal masters. I will never vote for a resolution that will cut women off from refuge from designing and brutal men. No woman married to an evil man has married; what a terrible thing it would have been to see her pronounced vicious and outspoken temperaments to have been tied up for life to a 'brutal' man."—Spencer Leader.

—Gov. Folk tried to close the saloons in St. Louis on Sunday, but the local authorities decided that there was only a constructive recess between Saturday night and Monday morning.

—Before a boy goes to school, almost invariably, he aspires to follow the same occupation as that of his father. Even if he is to be a doctor, he goes to school while he has different aspirations. He wants a better or different job from that of his father. If he goes to school or college long enough he doesn't want any job at all. Is the school to blame?—Spencer Leader.

—In three successive days last week John D. Rockefeller gave $100,000 to different Baptist organizations to be used for missionary work. Not a murmur has been heard about any possible tax on the money, and no doubt it will be put to good use. Even at this generous rate of giving, Mr. Rockefeller will hardly be able to do poor since $100,000 is not very much more than his daily income from his immense fortune.—Farmington Chronicle.

—We have seedless apples and oranges, the spineless cactus, and the fadeless flower, and the only thing needed in that line to make our happiness complete is the boneless fish.

—Street loafers of the confirmed variety are a constant drawback to the industrial and moral well-being of any town. We may say that an individual is a loafer if he is to be found, after day, lounging about the streets during work hours. In the majority of such cases there is some patient, hard working woman, who by long hours of toil at home or in shop, manages to feed the loafer and supply him with clothing.—Randolph Register.

—The New York assembly failed to pass the bill prohibiting the docking of horses' tails, but the discussion of the subject must have had some effect in showing the hideousness of the practice.

—The determination to apply the law against spitting has become so widespread, and its enforcement has been taken up by so many schools and societies and organization of various names and natures, and there is a strong likelihood that people everywhere are to be brought to a conscious knowledge of the unhealthfulness of the habit of spitting, and to an observance of the sanitary laws in this regard. There are vigilant ones everywhere, in the cars and all public places, who are ready to assist the Government in its strict and thorough enforcement of a law that means health and cleanliness whenever and wherever applied. Now and then we hear of the ordinance being enforced. The presence of so many signs against spitting, in depots and halls, is constantly calling attention to the fact of the law that is standing in this regard; and it cannot be long before no one can be excused because of lack of information about spitting and its evils.—Boston Courier.

—Reynolds Post, G. A. R., of Weymouth, are to do away with the usual Memorial day parade this year. In its place the school children will decorate the graves in different sections of the town. In the afternoon they will gather at the new park in East Weymouth where appropriate exercises will be held.

—Speaking of advertising, it is not the class of goods that a merchant has a great demand for, that he should advertise. The goods advertise themselves. The goods that should sell well but for some unknown reason don't, are the ones to advertise. Every storekeeper has this kind of goods in his store. They lie there for months and he wonders why they don't sell. The simple reason is that people don't know he has them. He should advertise them to the public. Of course, there is always chance for improvement and the progressive merchant or storekeeper deems it wise to advertise every line of goods in his store; not all at once, but taking up something new every little while. The time to advertise is when you want more business.—Norwood Advertiser.

—The past week a hard blow was given efforts that are being made or may be made to establish State laws for shorter hours in private enterprises. A decision of the Supreme Court has declared unconstitutional the New York State law making a week a day's work and sixty hours a week's work in bakeries in that State. This decision, it seems, based itself upon the fact of the interference of the law with the free exercise of contract between individuals. So it would appear that no further appeals to State laws, or for the making of State laws may be had, to ameliorate the conditions of workers. Surely, as Justice Harlan has said, "no more important Supreme Court decision has been rendered in the last century."—Boston Courier.

—Revere is confronted with a $25-tax rate but it seems a partial relief. The open Sunday has hardly begun, but last Monday morning the court room was well packed with Sunday drunks and fast automobile drivers. It is, however, a question of doubt as to whether court fines reduce tax rates, the conditions which bring the fines, cost high.—Weymouth Transcript.

—The announcement that at last the body of John Paul Jones, the young Scotchman who 130 years ago was appointed a first lieutenant in our navy, has been found, sends a thrill through one's nerves. It was this same Jones who has been credited in raising the first flag ever displayed at the masthead of a regular American cruiser. After a long search the casket has been found in a burial plot now eighteen feet below the surface of a thickly populated portion of Paris. The body was found to be in an excellent state of preservation, notwithstanding it has been buried more than a hundred years. Anticipating their removal to this country, the remains were carefully preserved in alcohol and enclosed in a lead casket. Medical experts who made a careful examination and comparison of all available data unhesitatingly declare that there can be no doubt of the identity of the body. The government will undoubtedly take steps to bring the body to this country, where it will be placed either in the national cemetery at Arlington, or in the grounds of the naval academy at Annapolis, with fitting honors.

—With money as the accepted measure of value it is a common error to accept it as a measure of happiness. The mansions of millionaires shelter more misery than the cottages of the poor. Take time to consider your good fortune; compare your worries and troubles with what they are above and below you, and then take just pride in your home and city and the happiness that abounds in both.—Somerville Journal.

—The man who will do a mean trick to get an office will continue to do mean things when he gets there. The two denominations have really found that they like each other exceedingly well, since becoming acquainted. It took a fire, which destroyed the Baptist edifice, to bring them together, but now the Baptists are no more ready to move out again.—Brookline Enterprise.

—Andrew Carnegie offered to give the United States $20,000,000, the price paid to Spain, if the government would give the Philippines independence. He has given $5,000,000 to provide rewards and pensions for heroes of peace. Mr. Carnegie is the wisest man who ever controlled $100,000,000. The old religious idea that wealth is a trust would be out of date if all rich men had given spirit and wisdom of Carnegie.—Universal Leader.

—Oiler faddists are beginning to set up their Oiler clubs, to become a member of which one must be about forty-five years of age. The Oiler idea, after all, is encouraged by a very few who are swayed to and fro by the seeming eloquence of any voice they happen to hear. The busy, active elderly, of sixty years and over, are one of the established facts here in America against Oilerism. True enough, the good old business-like American indeed "does not know where to stop." Many of his ilk has decided that a dead stop will prove a dead stop, sure enough, for him; so he prefers to keep on working hard and faithfully to the end of his harness, a stirring example for all coming Americans.—Boston Courier.

—Granite Street Improvements. Things are booming just at present at the head of Granite street and the prospects are that within a few months a business block will occupy the site now occupied by various small buildings owned by Henry H. Faxon. Just what the changes he is to make, and what is to be done cannot now be said, as Mr. Faxon says his plans are not yet perfected. Work has already been commenced tearing down some of the small buildings on Granite street.

—Work has also commenced excavating for a foundation for the old house recently occupied as a restaurant, which it is understood will be moved back. It is also understood that the old post-office building will be moved from its present location further down Granite street.

—On the Granite street front there will be a business block, commencing at the Welch block and extending nearly to Sheppard and Sons' coal office. The postoffice will probably be located in the new block.

—Peter MacQueen Lecture. It was a well filled house that greeted Rev. Peter MacQueen last evening at the Washington Street Congregational church, when Dr. MacQueen gave a beautifully illustrated lecture on Russia. The speaker was presented to the audience by Mr. Arthur W. Newcomb. Among the opening pictures were those of the Car and Caravan. The personality of the Car was touched upon by a good-hearted man with very little backbone. Russia's present ruler will probably be spoken of in the next reign as the unfortunate ruler.

—Pictures of Russian scenery were particularly fine. The grand cathedrals and palaces at St. Petersburg were also shown upon the curtain. Mr. MacQueen remarked briefly upon each scene and from many shown one could get a fairly clear idea of far-away Russia.

—Baseball Year. This is a baseball year. The enthusiasm of the fans is unlimited and everyone is looking for the best reports of the national games. Two full pages, covering all the sporting news in New England, is what the Boston Journal presents to its readers every day. Bob Dunbar's sporting chat, the best in every way that is printed, and the cartoons by "Bart" which appear nearly each day, give one an idea of what takes place in the sporting world in a unique and attractive manner. Pictures of the most prominent in the sporting world are printed daily, and everything is reported in detail from local baseball games to an international game of checkers.

K. of C. Annual Ball.

An annual event that is looked forward to with many thoughts of pleasure is the Easter Monday night ball of the Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus. This organization's reputation as being royal entertainers has long been successfully established and Monday night's affair at Music hall only served to add another endorsement to it.

A large and efficient committee has long been at work perfecting its arrangements for it, and it was determined that this year's affair should if possible eclipse all previous efforts.

How well they succeeded can be borne out by the many who were in attendance. Entrancing music, handsomely gowned women, gallant gentlemen and pretty decorations served to form a combination whose effect was indeed pleasant to look upon.

While hundreds participated in the merry dance, there were many more who were content to enjoy the music and watch the gay scene from the balcony.

The platform never looked more attractive than on this occasion. Potted plants in large numbers were tastefully arranged along the front of the platform while streamers of green were festooned across the front. It was a setting of green with just a touch of color in pink and white flowers.

Behind this high bank was Cull's orchestra which furnished music for the promenade concert and the ball that followed.

It was 8 o'clock when the concert commenced and the following pleasing program rendered:

March, "Topicalities" Eastman Concert Waltz, "Loveless" Holman
Melody Overture, "Blue Bird" Howley
Trombone Solo, Selected.

Caprice, "Love and Kisses" Chas. K. Harris
Xylophone Solo, "Karam" Mabel McKinley
By Gerald A. Sullivan.

While this was in progress the guests were arriving and at 9 o'clock, when the march, that inaugurated the ball, was started the larger part of the guests had arrived.

The march in itself was a feature. Owing to the illness of Grand Knight, Peter J. Cahill, who was floor marshal, the march was headed by Deputy Grand Knight, Timothy J. Carey, and Mrs. Peter J. Cahill.

Following were State Secretary W. J. O'Brien and Miss Minnie Cashman, Postmaster Charles L. Hammond and Miss Mary Carey. In their wake were upwards of one hundred couples.

The program of dances was one that would please all, being made up of the usual modern dances interspersed with quadrilles and the like.

At 11 o'clock a supper was served in the annex.

Among the guests present were Rev. John P. Coffey, Rev. John P. Coffey, Rev. Matthew McDonnell, William J. O'Brien, secretary; James H. Eloc, chief of St. Francis Court of Foresters; President M. T. Walsh of Division 18, A. O. H.; President Philip F. Egan of Division 4, A. O. H., and Postmaster Charles L. Hammond.

The several committees in charge were designated by different colored badges. That of the floor marshal, blue and white; floor director, gold and white; the aids, white and the reception committee, crimson.

Peter J. Cahill was floor marshal; Timothy J. Carey, floor director; John J. Cuniff and Joseph A. Keating, assistant floor directors and they were assisted by a large corps of aids.

Past Grand Knight William T. Shea was chairman of the reception committee and he was assisted by a large committee who were untiring in looking after the welfare of their guests.

The committee of arrangements to whom the success of the affair was largely due was as follows:

Peter J. Cahill, chairman, John J. Cuniff, secretary; John W. Walsh, Treasurer, Wm. T. Shea, Robert E. McDonnell, Timothy O'Connell, John W. McAnaney, Edward J. Sullivan, Timothy J. Carey, Bart. A. McLean.

St. Jean Baptiste. The thirteenth annual ball of Societe St. Jean Baptiste was held Monday evening at St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, and was attended by upwards of seventy five couples which completely filled the hall.

The hall was prettily decorated with flags bunting and potted plants. The Lyon's orchestra furnished music for the dancing, and the grand march which opened the ball was led by Mr. and Mrs. Narcisse LeClair, who were followed by Floor Director, Archille J. Rogers and Miss Lillian Higgins.

During a brief intermission at midnight, supper was served in the lower hall.

Those in charge of the affairs were as follows: Directeur de Danse, — Archille J. Rogers. Assistant Directeur de Danse, — Ernest Rogers.

Aides, — Thomas J. Rouillard, Alphonse E. LeClair, William R. Rogers, Napoleon J. Larendou, Arthur F. LeClair, Napoleon Reed.

Comite de Reception, — Emile Badot, Charles D. LeClair, Joseph Landry.

Neighborhood Meeting. The Women's Alliance of First church always has a particularly pleasant afternoon for its closing session of the season and that of Monday night was no exception. It was the annual meeting and also a neighborhood meeting, guests being present from twenty-five other Alliances.

Spring flowers, daffies, Easter lilies and ferns made the chapel very attractive. The new officers were: Mrs. Frank S. Davis; vice presidents, Mrs. Henry M. Faxon and Mrs. Emory L. Crane; secretary, Mrs. Thomas Fenn; treasurer, Mrs. N. S. Hunting, and ten on the board of directors.

Miss Abby Perry of Framingham gave a most interesting and helpful talk on "Meeting our Lives."

During the social hour tea was served from a daintily appointed table the pourers being Mrs. Henry M. Faxon and Miss Alice Keith Prescott. Prizes were served by the Misses Gertrude Walker, Stella Barker, Miriam Rogers, Katherine Saville and Irma Tilton.

The flower committee for the afternoon were Mrs. George G. Saville and Mrs. John Christiansen, and the tea committee: Mrs. F. S. Davis, Mrs. Emory L. Crane, Mrs. Osborne Rogers, Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Mrs. A. H. Doble, Mrs. H. M. Faxon and Mrs. Clarence Burgin.

It was a very pleasant affair and enjoyed by over a hundred members and guests.

The City Council.

Councilmen Adams, Flaherty and Sawyer were the only absent members at Monday night's meeting of the City Council.

The mayor sent a communication stating that through a clerical error the name of the registrar of voters sent to the City Council, April 17, was given as Frank J. Tinney, when it should have been Frank Tinney. The change of name was confirmed.

A communication was received from the School department approving the Gould plans for enlarging the High school and stating that if the council could not build the whole addition at this time they would be willing that one wing should be built. Referred to the Committee on Public Buildings.

The communication from the School Board of February 6 in relation to the High school was taken from the file and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings.

A number of petitions for minor law changes were also referred.

A petition was received from W. J. Tilly and others that Sea street be extended from high to low water mark. Referred to joint committee on Streets and Public Buildings.

The Committee on Streets reported on the following matters: Adopted. Granting the N. E. Telephone Company attachments of wires on Taylor and Squantum streets. To a second reading.

Granting William Cashman permission to build a private railroad track across the city from the depot to the beach, and a second reading.

For a Public Hearing, May 15, on widening Hancock street on the west side from Saville to Dimmock streets. Adopted.

Granting the New England Telephone Co. attachment of wires on poles of Edwards, Union, Cranich and Whitwell streets. To a second reading.

Public hearing May 1, on petition of the Telephone Company for attachments of wires on Granite street, South Central avenue and Hall place. Adopted.

Public hearing, May 15, on accepting Glendale road. Adopted.

Public hearing, May 15, on accepting a part of Upland road. Adopted.

Public hearing, June 5, on laying out North Payne street. Adopted.

A public hearing was held at 8 o'clock on relocating Sagamore street. No one appeared for or against the relocation. Hearing closed and order recommended.

The Committee on Licenses reported an order for a public hearing May 15 on the petition of L. B. Titus for a license to grow oysters at Squantum. Adopted.

Councilman Bass offered an order for $137 for refunding tax titles of J. W. Moorehead, John L. Jones, John L. Jones, Margaret Ellis and the United States Standard Scale Company. Rules suspended and order passed.

Councilman Bass offered an order requesting the Mayor to petition the Electric Light and Gas Commission for a reduction in the price of electricity. The Electric Light and Power Company. Laid on the table.

Councilman Stone moved and it was voted that the joint Committee on Finance and Ordinances report at the next meeting on the order for one day for the firemen.

Councilman Stewart offered an order amending the junk dealers' ordinance so as to provide that metal plates with the number of the license should appear on the wagon and that drivers should wear a metal plate on the hat, bearing the license number. These badges to be furnished by the Chief of Police. To Committee on Ordinances.

Councilman Stewart moved that the Ordinance relating to Woodward salaries be taken from the table.

Councilman Bass opposed. He hoped the Council would not be slow to stay where it is until after the hearing before the Attorney General.

City Solicitor Thomas said that the hearing had been postponed at his request as he had not time to prepare for it.

Councilman Stone—If this is settled now there will be no further action by the Attorney General.

Councilman Bass thought that a weak-nosed argument.

Councilman Chamberlain said a law suit was involved. It will cost the city at least $3000 to defend the suit. It is nothing of the importance. If we do pass of this now it will settle the whole matter.

The motion to take from the table was defeated by the following vote: YES—Chamberlain, Chase, Gassett, Low, Polk, Savage, Steward, Sullivan, NO—Barry, Bass, Burgess, Crane, Gearwar, Hughes, Hynes, Piper, Sidelinger, Sprague—10.

Not voting—Nichols. Absent—Adams, Flaherty, McLane, Sawyer—4.

For Attorney General. Ana P. French, our successful district attorney of the southwestern district (Norfolk and Plymouth) is likely to follow District Attorney Seaboard to the northern district (Middlesex) in announcing his candidacy for attorney-general. District-Attorney French was urged months ago to be a candidate, but he had already declined to be a candidate for the United States district-attorneyship, and would not consent to run for attorney-general either. Since then the urging of prominent Republicans in this district to induce French to allow the use of his name to succeed Attorney-General Parker has greatly increased. He has never sought public office, however, and has no desire to enter a scramble. Twice now the unprecedented honor has been conferred upon him of receiving the nomination of both parties and election as district attorney for this district. This district has the record of receiving the most state ticket within the memory of the present generation and leading Republicans in this part of the state are getting together to demand recognition. A. P. French was educated at Yale ('82) and B. U. law school; served as clerk to the Alaska, the court at Washington, of which his father, Asa French (died 1870), was one of the judges; admitted to the bar in 1885; married Miss Wales of Randolph in 1887; has two children; won fame in the Bram case being associated with J. E. Otter for defense of Mrs. N. S. H. Doble. He has been highly organized all over New England for his fearless course in securing the indictment of seven or eight ring leaders in the tarring and feathering case at Marion, though public sentiment so far shielded the indicted men that the jury acquitted them.—Stoughton Sentinel.

All Souls Church, Braintree.

All Souls church dedicated its new and beautiful building on Tuesday evening, April 18th. Never was a day more auspiciously anticipated. Never were realizations so complete and so happy. The building was finished and when one realizes that it was but nine months ago that the first sod was turned it is really a great achievement.

The night was perfectly ideal, warm, still and clear. The moon was so bright that the church stood out in all its strength and dignity and could be clearly seen in all its details by the throngs who came to the service. The light from within came through the low windows and made a perfect picture of the church and so the very first service was a deeply impressive.

At just eight Rev. Thomas Van Ness who preached the sermon, Rev. Frederick R. Griffin who gave the address, and Rev. Frederick R. Griffin who conducted the service came into the pulpit. With an announcement the audience sang the hymn which begins:

"Unto thy Temple, Lord, we come With thankful hearts to worship thee And pray that thou be our home Until we touch eternity."

Then followed the prayer of Invocation, and the scripture reading by the minister. After this came the simplest most dignified and most impressive part of all this impressive service.

The conclusion of the scripture reading, George O. Wales as chairman of the building committee walked down the centre aisle to a place before the pulpit to formally transfer the building to the parish. George Henry Arnold as president of the parish came to the front to receive the building on behalf of the parish. Everyone realized the fitness of having these two men take this part.

Mr. Wales as chairman of the building committee was the natural one to present the building and he was the right one for other and greater reasons. He was a most generous giver to the church. He had followed the construction of the church every day, he had personally supervised every part, had given time and sympathy to the work as well as money, and further he has been most devoted to all the interests of the parish from its start.

Mr. Arnold as president was the logical one to receive the building, both because of his office in the parish and because of his long devotion to the cause of liberal religion. He was one of the staunchest and most generous supporters of the old Universalist church and in all Souls he has been like Mr. Wales a most unselfish and loyal member and wise officer. These facts were in the minds of all, as these two men stood before the congregation.

Mr. Wales said: "On behalf of the building committee I formally transfer this church edifice to you, Mr. Arnold, as president of the parish. At the expiration of the legal thirty days the building will be entirely free from debt. I will also state at this time that the organ is given in memory of Abbie Frances Faxon Wales."

Mr. Arnold said in substance: "On behalf of the parish, I accept this beautiful church. You have most successfully completed the task which the parish placed in your hands. You have been devoted, deeply interested and have been able to give to the parish what we deeply appreciate. We deeply appreciate your faithful work and to you, Mr. Wales, personally, we are most grateful for all you have done for the good-will and life of this church. Mr. Arnold then offered his hand to Mr. Wales and gave him a vigorous and hearty handshake.

This summary of Mr. Arnold's most gracious speech fails to give a full idea of the appropriateness and strength of what he said.

This part of the service was most informal but it was so impressive that we hardly had a dry eye in the church. Then followed the responsive service of dedication arranged for this occasion.

The prayer of dedication was by the minister.

The sermon of dedication was given by Rev. Thomas Van Ness. He said in part: "Why have you Universalists and Unitarians come together to form this church? Because you believe as your responsive service says in the One—The Eternal—and the only God, and that God dwelleth in you. One of the foundations of this church is the belief in the permanence of the spirit of man. He emphasized the part that this church believes that the human soul is a part of God's abiding life and that it is therefore immortal. From the part that God is our Father, the father of the white, the brown, the yellow and the black man proceeds the truth that we are all brothers; and how different our lives would be if we fully recognized this human brotherhood! If the men now killing each other on the plains of Manchuria really believed that they were killing each other, they would think they would fight each other."

This brings us naturally to the question what is the object of life. This he said was to develop their soul a spirit of man. And we are to be judged, not by our achievement but by the way in which we meet the test of life.

After another congregational hymn Rev. Frederick W. Hamilton gave an address, which was fitting, strong and helpful. The subject might have been "The simplicity which is in Christ." He said in part: "I have been thinking about this simple service, how strong it has been, I have been looking at your splendid church, how very simple it is, yet how dignified, how beautiful, how permanent it appears."

Everything in life which is strong and true and beautiful is simple. The great works of art, the great buildings, the great poems, the great lives have been simple. Jesus teaching like his life was simple, he said the kingdom of heaven is at hand which means it is within reach, that is the object of life, that is the key to happiness and power. And this kingdom of heaven is the life of a child, simple, trustful, teachable, sweet and pure.

He closed by a strong appeal to seek this simple but strong life, to keep the church firm in its purpose to attain this life. He was deeply touched by Mr. Hamilton's reference to the memorial to Mrs. Abbie Frances Faxon Wales and he said: "It was spontaneous but exactly right that he said."

From the Braintree Observer.

Two another hymn and the benediction by the minister and the service closed. The organ played on and it meant more to the people than when it was first played. It was then beautiful music but with the knowledge of its source, it meant far more. It's sound carried the note of a harmonious, beautiful life.

All Souls church now has a permanent home, beautiful, well adapted and debt free.

Receivers Appointed. Wm. H. Baker and Lucius R. Eastman, Jr., were on April 21, appointed receivers of the United States Standard Scale Company, a Maine corporation, having a manufacturing business at Wollaston, by Judge Colt in the United States circuit court. They were named in a suit brought by Samuel W. McCall and Charles F. Choate, Jr., receivers of the Union Trust Company, says the Herald.

The Scale company, on Sept. 18, 1901, gave a mortgage and trust deed to the Union Trust Company on all its property and patents to secure an issue of bonds. The plaintiffs claim that the Scale company has committed breaches of the trust arrangement by not paying taxes upon its real estate and by suffering several of its lots to be sold for unpaid taxes, and that several suits have been brought against it, including one by the Trust company, which has recovered a judgment upon notes for $11,000. This judgment is not satisfied. The bill further alleges that the Scale company has validly issued only $25,000 of its bonds, but that other bonds, the number and amount of which is not known to the plaintiffs, have been unlawfully issued to other parties, including Andrew A. Meyer, its president, and H. A. Meyer, his son. The receivers are to furnish bonds for $20,000 each.

Sunday Raids. The police put on their war paint Sunday and went after some persons on Canal street, whom they had reason to believe were selling intoxicating liquor. In the raiding party were Chief Burrell, Lieutenant McKay, Officers Goodhue, Milford, Thorne and Cahill.

The first place visited was that of Nicola Contino at 70 Canal street. Here the officers seized a gallon of wine. They then visited Contino's store, at 51 Canal street, where 110 bottles of beer, a jug and two bottles containing whiskey were seized. Contino was placed under arrest.

The next place visited was that of Nazaroni Dapantello, at 49 Canal street, where the police seized a part of a case of beer, a quart of wine, four quarts whiskey and a gallon of wine.

During the progress of the raid some Italians got into a row in front of the store, during which it is alleged that Bell Finzi with a baseball bat, the bat was smashed but Nicola's head was not badly injured. Finzi was placed under arrest.

Supt. Anthony Resigns. John C. Anthony, superintendent of the schools in Weymouth has sent in his resignation to take effect May 1st. The school committee voted to increase his salary to $2,000, but he declined, having accepted an offer to go to the Thompson Island Farm school at a greatly increased salary.

The Farm school on Thompson Island, near Squantum, is a private school for good boys, who may have lost one or both of their parents, and is one of the oldest and best in New England. The instruction and training given there is unique and the school is known throughout the country as a model of modern education. Among the special features of the school are the model farm, under a graduate of Cornell, the manual training, including wood, metal and forge work, the original school of the Farm school, a complete set of municipal organization and managed by the boys, and the school paper, an eight page monthly, written, edited and printed by the scholars. Each boy has a flower garden of his own, and there are pets, games and amusements without number.

The diploma of the Farm school admits to the Boston High schools, and some of the most prominent men of Boston are among its graduates, while the only two Americans in the Boston Symphony orchestra are graduates of the Farm school band.

First Veto.

Governor Douglas followed the example of Governor Bates on Monday and sent to the Legislature a veto of the bill for the incorporation of the Massachusetts Casualty Company. It was his first veto.

As the governor says, our insurance laws are "the carefully prepared results of years of experience," until they are now acknowledged to be the best and most generally effective in the country. There should be no letting down of the bars they have raised for the public protection, no matter how innocent appears the process. It may mean no particular harm to permit an insurance company to do both a casualty and a boiler guaranty business, but the insurance laws say that companies shall engage in only one class at a time. To permit any set of men double privileges on one capital, says the Boston Journal, is certainly legislative favoritism, and is rightly discouraged.

Poetry.

Lost.

What? Lost your temper, did you say?

Well, dear, I would not mind it, if it is not such a dreadful loss—

Pray do not try to find it.

It chased the dimples all away.

And wrinkled up your forehead.

And changed a pretty, smiling face

To one—well, simply horrid.

It put to flight the cheery words

The laughter and the singing.

And closed upon a smiling sky

It would persist in bringing.

And now it's gone! Then, do, my dear,

Make it your best endeavor

To quickly find a better one,

And lose it—never, never.

—Gladys's Scrap-book.

Miscellaneous.

AUNT JANE.

"Anything exciting in your letters this morning, dear?"

"Well, I don't know," said Lucy; "here's a letter from Aunt Jane."

"Aunt Jane? Did I ever meet Aunt Jane before we married?"

Lucy got up and went round the breakfast table looking troubled.

"Tom, dear, you remember that day you asked me to be your wife?"

"Yes," he replied. "Why, what's the matter?"

"You remember I said I had an awful sin to confess—a past, a present and a future; something you might never be able to forgive?"

"Yes," he replied. "I don't think I should have listened." He put his arm round her.

"Well, it was—it was Aunt Jane," he said.

"Great Scott!" he replied. "Was it as bad as that? But I don't remember having heard of her."

"No, I kept her away—in a cupboard. I know it was wrong of me. She didn't know it was wrong of me. She didn't write to congratulate me, or anything, even on my wedding day, so I thought it might be all right. I quite hoped she would never forgive me, or I would have told you before, I really would."

"Well, well," he said, "it can't be helped. Who is she, and what does she do?"

"She pays visits, chiefly. And she says here that she may forgive me."

"She hasn't actually done so?"

"No."

"Then why despair?" He cheered up.

"No, but she says that, though I have married an abominable man—"

"You mean to say you've never told her you've married an angel?"

"No. Would it be quite true?" she asked, simply.

"Only three months married, and you ask that?"

"Well, she says that, in spite of it, she won't be too hard on me till she has seen you herself; that she thinks it is a great mistake that young wives should ever be left alone with their husbands; that I shall always find her house a refuge and asylum when I want it."

"Asylum!" he echoed. "Oh, is that the trouble?"

"I don't think she means that exactly," said Lucy. "But listen—this is the last sentence. 'I feel that I ought to do all I can to brighten your life, so I will come on Wednesday to stay a week or two.' Aunt Jane's invitations always were so indefinite. She always left a loophole for remaining." Lucy put the letter down and sighed.

"Only that I can remember did I go within a month of the time that she came, for then it was because Willy broke out all over in spots. She always had a horror of anything with spots ever since her gardener was eaten by a leopard."

"Today is Wednesday," said Tom, gloomily.

"Darling," she cried, "I shall never forgive myself for bringing this upon you!"

"It's not your fault altogether," he replied; "few of us can choose our ones."

"Oh, there's a postscript!" she exclaimed.

"Of course, the length of my visit will depend on the character of the man who has deluded you."

"Hush!" said Tom. "That's ambiguous. Will she go because I'm good and she can trust you to me, or because I'm bad and she can't stand me?"

"I'm sure I don't know," said Lucy. "Oh, here's another postscript. 'You will kindly remember my weakness for a hot water bottle.'"

"That throws no light," he said.

"What am I to do?"

"Never mind, darling; we must bear it together." He clasped her fondly in his arms.

"Would you still have married me," she asked timidly, "if you had known of this dreadful thing?"

"Yes, dear," he replied with emotion. "I am as bad as you are; you have got to meet my Uncle George." And he hurried off to his work with guilty face, before she could ask any questions.

Aunt Jane arrived, as threatened, punctually a quarter of an hour late. She was always a quarter of an hour late, on principle. It arose out of a dislike for being kept waiting when asked out to dinner, for instance, and rapidly spread over the whole of her movements, owing to her morbid passion for regularity. To be late for breakfast and in time for luncheon upset her for a week, and she was scrupulously late for everything. This was annoying, unless you knew her and allowed for it; but so were most of the things Aunt Jane did. She was small, but enjoyed a deep bass voice.

"Ah, my poor child," was her greeting, "how ill you are looking!"

"I didn't know it," said Lucy me

SATURDAY, MAY 13, 1905.

Post Office to Move.

Plans have been completed by McLean and Wright, and work will be commenced immediately on the erection of a new business block on the north side of Granite street by Henry H. Faxon. The block will have a street frontage of about 205 feet and will extend from the Dr. Welch block to the block now occupied in part by Joel F. Sheppard & Sons.

It will be a one story block but with a sufficient foundation for four stories. It will contain altogether nine stores. The first will have a frontage of 58 feet and the next three of 24 feet each. These four stores will have a depth of 90 feet. The next five stores will have street frontage of 18 feet each and a depth of 75 feet.

The building will be of fire proof construction with brick partitions between the stores, each of which will be lighted by large plate glass windows on the front, by sky lights and windows in the rear.

The building as a whole will conform to the existing development on Granite street.

The second store in the block will be occupied as the Quincy postoffice. The office will have a frontage of 24 feet and a uniform width of 24 feet to a depth of 40 feet, the balance of the office to be a depth of 20 feet.

The government has taken a ten years' lease of the rooms which the postoffice will occupy and it is expected that they will be ready for occupancy September 1.

The building will be constructed by day work under the supervision of Henry M. Faxon.

The rear entrance will be by a driveway 25 feet wide leading from Granite street just east of the railroad track.

Maple Place Widening.

A public hearing will be held before the City Council next Monday evening on the acceptance and laying out, as a public way, of Maple place from Washington to Chestnut and Hancock streets. This is an improvement which has long been needed, and the chances are brighter for favorable consideration.

Maple place at the present time extends from Washington street to the estate of the late Charles S. French. There has been a path, however, from the end of the street to Hancock street, which is much used and is found very convenient. It will become more so when the new Federal building is erected on the corner of Washington street and Maple place.

The plan of this street, as contemplated, lays it out to a width of 35 feet, which is a trifle wider than at present. On the south side a narrow strip containing 450 square feet is taken from the property of H. H. Faxon, 225 square feet from the property of R. Kingman, and 30 square feet from Robert T. Johnson.

On the north side 113 square feet is taken from the government lot, 180 square feet from Henry H. Faxon, and 325 square feet from H. A. Gill. From the present corner of Maple place the street runs a slight curve to the north taking 4,800 square feet from the C. S. French estate.

The proposed street when it passes through the Dr. French estate cuts off the larger part of the L. recently occupied by Frank P. Crane, and is owned by Fred B. Rice. It also takes off a corner of the old house now owned by Robert T. Johnson.

This street can be laid out at any future time, as it is understood that Mr. Rice will build a business block fronting on Chestnut street, upon the site where the proposed new street enters.

The land taken from the estates on Maple place are narrow strips and will improve rather than damage the property. The greatest expense therefore will be the land taken from the Dr. French estate. The fact that the rear part of this land will be enhanced in value should reduce the price to be paid for the land taken.

The street will be a short cut to the Public Library, the Y. M. C. A. building, and the post office when built, and will also divert travel from Chestnut street which is very narrow. City Square needs all the cross streets it can have.

Fifty Years a Teacher.

A public reception will be given on Friday evening next to Miss Julia E. Underwood, who has just completed fifty years as a teacher in the Quincy schools, all of which were in one grade at the Coddington building. Over 3000 boys and girls have during these years been graduated from her room and have usually been successful in the walks of life.

The committee for the reception, which will be held at High School hall, are: F. E. Parlin, the Superintendent of Schools; Miss Mary E. Dearborn, Principal of the Coddington School; and T. B. Pollard, President of the Quincy Teachers' Association.

Among the invited guests are George I. Aldrich and H. W. Lall, former superintendents of Quincy schools, and former members of the School Committee and former teachers at the Coddington. It will be an informal gathering, with music by the High School orchestra, and all friends of Miss Underwood are cordially invited.

Y. M. C. A. Opening.

The informal opening and inspection by contributors and other friends will take place at the Y. M. C. A. to-night, May 13. L. Willis, for some years secretary of the Omaha, Nebraska association, now in Worcester, will be present and will say a few words informally upon the general lines of the new work.

Mr. Frank P. Spear, the well known educational director of the Boston association will speak for ten minutes upon the possibilities of educational work in a community such as Quincy.

No long addresses will be given as the object is to show the work of the contributors and pass the evening in a social way.

Going to Newport. Miss Blanche M. Thayer, who up to a year ago has been matron of the City Hospital of Quincy since it was founded by Hon. William B. Rice in 1890, has been elected superintendent of the Newport, R. I., hospital. She resigned several times as the duties at the Quincy hospital were arduous, but each time her resignation was not accepted, as the trustees felt she could not be spared and she was granted leave of absence for several months. Last year Miss Thayer again resigned thinking to give up hospital work entirely, but was not allowed to leave as the trustees were not willing to let her go without her acceptance of the superintendency of the Newport hospital, which is a large well equipped institution.

Bird Neighbors.

IDA WHIPPLE BENHAM.

We made our nest, my love and I,
Above the roof of the old stone,
Up where the towers speak the sky;
"No home so lofty as this," we said,
"Nearest to heaven," we said, "are we;
The blue birds of air, fair and bright,
Broad rivers and brave hills we see,
And purple vistas laid in light."
We laughed for joy, my love and I,
Though poor as sparrows seeking bread,
"We will be able to do as they do,"
With hope and love and faith," we said.
From out a neighbor belfry's space
Two birds of snowy plumage flew,
With joyous note and buoyant gait,
Between our eyrie and the blue.

Notes and Comments.

Paragon park, Nantasket, is to be the attractive amusement place for this section of the state the coming summer according to the present indications. A large number of carpenters, painters, machinists, masons, etc., are now busy at the present time. The management is in hopes to open the new park by Memorial day. Laborers have been employed many months, yet there is much to be done.

The prominence given to the affairs of one of our large life insurance companies is of absorbing interest not only in this country, but in Europe and other parts of the world to which the great operations of business are extended. This fact exists both on account of the magnitude of the financial resources of the company and of its intimate relation to the economic welfare of the community. Life insurance is second only to the Savings Banks as a method of thrift and industry for the future protection of the individual, the family and the home. Its funds are in the nature of trust funds and should be kept under sacred care and management. A suspicion that they are tampered with for the selfish gain of those entrusted with their care, or used for speculation, casts a serious reflection upon the whole institution.—Boston Courier.

Some New York landlords raise the rent fifty cents per month in their flat for each baby born, once for all, the tenants out if they have any children. Here's a good opening for the anti-race suicide organizations—if there are any—to provide a bounty on babies to offset the cussedness and avarice of landlordism.—Spencer Leader.

Robert Spencer, a German traveler, who recently reached Berlin from Iceland, says the Icelanders are the most highly educated people in the world, and their average attainments there are far superior to those of the people of Germany.

The Jones bones may go a-begging before they find their final resting place in this country. It is a good time to settle the matter now, once for all. They will never cease quarrelling over Homer and Columbus and a few other worthies of earlier days. Let us hope that the States that are putting forth their different demands for the Jones bones may agree in the matter before the venerable relics arrive.—Boston Courier.

The Post Office Department declares that all "guessing" contests are gambling, but it continues to send out weather bureau "prediction."—Stoughton Sentinel.

William J. Hammer, the electrical engineer, has found a novel use for the wireless telegraph. In his New York home he is employing it to call the servants. On his dining-room table is a dainty transmitter and pole connected by means of a flexible silk cord with batteries under the table. Down in the kitchen is another pole, with transmitter and receiver, connected with an electric bell. The transmitter is no bigger than paper weights. When Mr. Hammer wants the maid he sends a wireless current through the wall of the room. The electrical waves are caught by the pole in the kitchen and the bell rings. A system of signals permits him to call for anything he desires.

The most successful advertisers of this country are the steady advertisers; the men who plan campaigns in great detail; the men who have started advertising in a modest way and have increased their appropriations as the results became apparent. These men have never been fool-hardy enough to believe that they could scale the heights of prosperity at a single bound, or could count on advertising to carry them along on a "dowry bed of ease" through the present. Advertising gathers force as it goes—step it for any length of time and you have to make up for the loss of momentum. The merchant or manufacturer who drops his advertising during dull seasons is dropping his own in midstream and is letting the current bear him backwards.—Printers' Ink.

The Japanese have organized at home and in Europe Red Cross societies for the care of the horses wounded during the war. Christianity may not arrogate to itself the claim of leading in all the humanities of life, but it is not easily finished within a few months. The work is being pursued with vigor, and the report is that the people whose names end with sky and ain help to make the enumeration a slower business than ever.

While New Yorkers are credited with living at a somewhat rapid pace, the death record indicates the same high rate of speed in dying as well as living. For example, there were 1700 very sudden deaths in New York City the first three months of this year. Sudden deaths are rapidly increasing in New York, for last year there were only 3000. It's the pace that kills.

A new get-rich-quick game was unearthed in Wellesley recently. Several women had counterfeited half dollars sprung upon them in a new way. A pedler visited many houses, and in several places where he was given silver half-dollars in payment for goods, he went back to his wagon to secure change, and in each case, upon returning, said the half-dollar he had received was counterfeit. Thereupon he would return a coin that was plainly a "home made" one, and would receive change for the purchases.

Last week in one of the Montreal churches, as the rector was about to read the prayer for the church militant, one of the most respected and useful women of the congregation left her pew, entered the chancel and proceeded to read Frances Ridley Havergal's well-known poem, "Without Christ." The effect on the startled rector and congregation was deeply impressive. The incident has been the theme of editorial comment in the Montreal press. It is admitted that duty inspired the act and that it was blessed to the hearers' good—but it was woefully unconventional!

The action of the French government in prohibiting life insurance companies from issuing tuition policies, is an advanced step, but still in line with safeguarding public interests. A tuition policy is simply another form of gambling, the surviving policy holder receiving the sum of money from others defaulted on maturing-by-death policies. Since the companies were not obliged to make accounting of the financial standing of those tuition policies, their issuance afforded an opportunity for disproportionate profits being retained, with no one outside the directors of the companies being the wiser. Massachusetts has never allowed its home companies to issue such policies, and the public generally do not approve of them.—Old Colony Memorial.

Commander R. E. Peary in an outline of his plan of campaign aboard his new Arctic steamer Roosevelt says that he purposed to leave New York some time between the first and the middle of July on his northward way, stopping at Sydney for coal. By the first of September he had planned to go into the waters of the ice barriers at Melville Bay and Cape Sabine. In February with the dawdling of the first new light his intention is to start with dog sledges on the four hundred and ninety mile dash from winter quarters to the pole. He thinks the sledge journey will prove less difficult than the task of forcing a way through the ice barriers of Smith Sound. The explorer expresses himself as entirely confident of the success of this plan, and believes it to be far the best which has been mapped out by any venturer in northern climes up to date.

The State has as much interest in the summer weather conditions as most of the proprietors of the seashore resorts. Last year's hot and dry season at Revere Beach netted the State $4,000, and if warm weather prevails throughout the coming season the returns from that source should equal those of last year, at any rate. We can imagine the State as having all the anxiety in anticipation that the hotel proprietor has who hopes for the sort of weather that will bring the biggest crowds to his particular bachelery.—Boston Courier.

The City Council.

The Sagamore street relocation was thoroughly thrashed out at Monday night's meeting of the City Council, and after being debated for an hour, was passed. The relocation of this street seems to be the key to the solution of the Atlantic bridge nuisance which will now probably be pushed to its completion.

Councilman Barry, Chamberlain, Gasset, Garraway, Hyman, Sidelinger and Piper were absent.

A communication was received from Mrs. Christopher A. Spear, thanking the City Council for the embossed resolutions on her late husband who was clerk of the Council. Placed on file. William Harkins petitioned for the refund of one-half cent of brick sidewalk on Goffe and Dimmock streets. To Finance Committee.

Several petitions for minor licenses were received and referred.

The Committee on Licenses reported orders granting licenses to common victualers, for junk wagon and other purposes. Adopted.

The Committee on Ordinances reported correctly engaged on the following orders:

Granting the N. E. T. Company attachment on Taylor street. Passed.

Granting the N. E. T. Company attachments on Squantum street. Passed.

Granting the N. E. T. Company attachments on Edwards and Union streets. Passed.

Granting the N. E. T. Company attachments on Cranch and Whitwell streets. Passed.

Granting William Chasman permission to cross Furnace avenue at grade with a private railroad track. Laid on the table.

The Committee on Finance reported ought to pass on the order relocating Sagamore street.

Councilman Bass did not feel that the order was in proper shape. His only criticism was that it did not provide that work be done under the betterment act. We are at sea as regards prices that will be charged for land, and the results will be suit against the city. If laid out under the betterment act the city can obtain a set off.

Councilman Stone believed the Mayor had looked into the matter thoroughly, and it would be only a small matter, and the city would be protected.

Councilman Bass moved to amend by adding words so as to provide the relocation be done under the betterment act.

Councilman Adams was called to the chair.

President Nichols, taking the floor, said this matter was an important one to the city. This seemed to be the best solution of the whole problem. It was necessary for the city to act promptly. He had thought it might be advantageous to lay out under the betterment act if we could show betterments, but it is not apparent that they can be shown. Therefore there would be little if anything gained. He moved to lay on the table.

In reply to a question, Councilman Bass said he would not insist on the railroad and railway company knew it was not being laid out under the betterment act.

President Nichols withdrew his motion to lay on the table.

Councilman McLane hoped members from Ward One would not insist on betterment act. People have long been put to much inconvenience at this bridge. The street was worse today than a month ago.

Councilman Bass asked City Solicitor the betterment act would not place the city in a strong position.

City Solicitor Thomas—in most cases, but in this case of no benefit, because, it is going to be difficult to show betterments.

Mayor Thompson spoke at length, going into the history of the bridge widening. He said he claimed it was the city's place to take land for slopes. An order to that effect was introduced last year. A hearing was held on it this year.

At that time the two gentlemen representing land owners did not favor. He said he was made to plan for relocating Sagamore street. This plan impressed him favorably. The matter was gone over carefully with the railroad and railway companies. They were prepared to meet the city if expense was not too great. The expense compared favorably with the cost under the plan as decreed. The railroad said we oppose a retaining wall and the city will not take slopes. We will go to the courts and have the matter settled. No one wants that delay. Under this plan there is no question but what the city is in a strong position.

The railroad says, if this order passes work will be resumed at once.

Councilman Burgess was not opposed but desired some information. He asked several questions which the Mayor answered, which apparently set his mind at rest.

Councilman Chase could not see how a reduction could be made under the betterment act. If it goes to the courts the chances are that we will get but little more than now. It would be of advantage to the city to hasten improvement even if we had to pay $2000 more. We have shut up the main artery to Boston, and as now is the railroad can delay matters as long as they see fit.

Councilman Bass—This land is near the railroad and a good case could be worked up against the city on values. There had never been a time when we did not know what we are to pay for land.

Mayor Thompson quoted several streets that had been widened where the cost of land was not excessive—Water, Copeland, Codding and others.

Councilman Loud moved the previous question.

The amendment of Councilman Bass to add a betterment clause to the order was put and lost.

The order then passed to be ordained, Councilman Bass alone voting in the negative.

Councilman Bass offered an order authorizing the Mayor to sign an agreement with the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, and the Old Colony street railway in relation to expense of relocating Sagamore street. Adopted.

Councilman Bass offered an order authorizing the Mayor to petition the City Commissioners to change the decree relating to the widening of the bridge at Atlantic. Adopted.

Councilman Stewart offered an order changing the locations of Henry L. Miller's victualler's license from Vinton's lot to Leonard's lot. Adopted.

Upon motion of Councilman Bass the order for addition to the High school was taken from the Committee on Finance and referred to the Joint Committee on Finance and Public Buildings. Adjourned at 10 o'clock.

Pastor Installed.

A large number of people were present on May 5, at the installation of the Rev. Ernest W. Hunt as pastor over the Wollaston Unitarian church.

The opening services included an organ voluntary by Miss Eugenia Hatch, an invocation by Rev. John H. Holmes, of New Dorchester, and scripture reading by Rev. Benj. F. McDaniel, of Dorchester.

Rev. Charles E. St. John, of Boston, preached a very strong sermon, taking as his text—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might; Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

REV. ERNEST W. HUNT.

Rev. James Eells of Boston, with whom Mr. Hunt has recently been associated, gave the charge to the minister. He spoke of the troubles and trials and the life of a minister, and urged him to overcome them. He concluded by giving Mr. Hunt a few friendly words of advice.

Rev. Elmer C. Butler of Quincy gave the "Right Hand of Fellowship." He welcomed Mr. Hunt heartily, and extended his congratulations, encouragement and advice.

Mr. Frederick H. Bishop extended the parish's greetings to their new pastor, and in a few well chosen words he welcomed Mr. Hunt in their behalf, to the church, their homes, and their hearts.

Rev. Frank W. Pratt of Hopedale, the second pastor, spoke to the people, and tried to impress upon them the fact that the minister can not do his work without the hearty co-operation of the people, and he felt from his five years' experience at Wollaston, that this would be given him.

"The Welcome of the Local Clergy" was extended to Mr. Hunt by the Rev. E. A. Chase of the Wollaston Congregational church. Mr. Chase described Wollaston to him in its different aspects and congratulated him on coming to a place of such natural beauty and among a class of people who are alive to every human interest. He extended a most cordial welcome to Mr. Hunt for himself and the local clergy.

The closing prayer was given by the Rev. Eugene R. Shippen of Dorchester, and the benediction was pronounced by the new pastor.

The music of the evening included extremely well rendered anthems and responses by the regular church choir, Mrs. Frank A. Page, Mrs. George H. Collier, Mr. Madison S. Jordan and Dr. Edward S. J. Jan; also two hymns by the congregation.

The Norfolk County tax for the year, the amount and apportionment shows an increase of about 40 per cent. over the tax of 1904. The total tax levy is $231,000, as against $162,500 a year ago.

The cause of the extraordinary increase in the county tax is the main, the completion and occupation of the new registry of deeds, which it is expected will take place about the first of July. This will make extra expenses for maintenance and also for the interest and debt accounts. The county also has to pay higher salaries to some of the officials of the courts and of the Legislature of last year, and the expense of the Quincy Point bridge comes on the county until the apportionment is settled. The ordinary expenses also are growing, but it is not expected that the tax of this year will be necessary next year, nor for some years to come.

Minstrels and May Party.

There was a large attendance at St. Mary's hall on May 5, at the minstrel show and May dance given under the auspices of Division 5, A. O. H.

Miss B. T. Crowley was the inter-locutor, while Misses Kelley, Katherine Leary and Joseph Daley took the tambos, and Cassie McDonald, Margaret Farrell and James Vogue rattled the bones.

After the minstrel show came the dance. Miss B. T. Crowley had charge of the show, and was assisted by Misses Beatrice Joyce, Mary Lally, Mary Barron, Alice O'Brien, Mary Sweeney and Louise Egan.

The committee on Harbor and Public Lands of the Legislature were in Quincy, May 5, viewing the need of better waterways. The National government has appropriated $80,000 for dredging outside the Quincy Point bridge, provided the State will make an appropriation for the Fore river above the bridge, and for Town river.

The bill in the Legislature for $30,000, was taken from the Committee on Finance and referred to the Joint Committee on Finance and Public Buildings. Adjourned at 10 o'clock.

A Nuisance.

The communication of the Board of Health to the City Council relative to the nuisance at the Quincy Canal is of interest because they have carefully considered the matter, suggested an abatement, and give figures as to the cost. It is given in full:

Gentlemen:—In accordance with the order of your honorable body of April 3, 1905, the Board of Health beg to submit the following report:

On April 28, 1905, the Board in company with the City Engineer visited the Canal, situated near Canal street and found the place in a very filthy condition. A once navigable canal is now turned into a dumping ground for all sorts of refuse material, including waste paper, ashes, old b-o's and shoes, tin cans, b-t's, broken furniture, stable manure and garbage.

Owing to this deposit of refuse material and to the natural causes of river deposits, this canal, in which a few years ago a vessel of 500 tons could be draught was able to sail within a short distance from Washington street, has now become not only a shallow distorted water way, but an eye sore and a source of grave danger to health. It is a danger to the danger to health we would like to call your attention to the following facts:

It has long been a universally acknowledged fact that dampness on or near the surface of the ground has an injurious effect upon the health of those living nearby. In addition to rheumatism, neuralgia and diseases of the respiratory tract, typhoid, diphtheria and malaria stand out most prominently. Now, but a single glance at this unsanitary locality, is enough to satisfy the most arbitrary person that we have here a most beautiful habitat for these germs. Surely no person can be expected to overcome them. He concluded by giving Mr. Hunt a few friendly words of advice.

Mr. Elmer C. Butler of Quincy gave the "Right Hand of Fellowship." He welcomed Mr. Hunt heartily, and extended his congratulations, encouragement and advice.

Mr. Frederick H. Bishop extended the parish's greetings to their new pastor, and in a few well chosen words he welcomed Mr. Hunt in their behalf, to the church, their homes, and their hearts.

Gentlemen:—In accordance with the order of your honorable body of April 3, 1905, the Board of Health beg to submit the following report:

On April 28, 1905, the Board in company with the City Engineer visited the Canal, situated near Canal street and found the place in a very filthy condition. A once navigable canal is now turned into a dumping ground for all sorts of refuse material, including waste paper, ashes, old b-o's and shoes, tin cans, b-t's, broken furniture, stable manure and garbage.

Owing to this deposit of refuse material and to the natural causes of river deposits, this canal, in which a few years ago a vessel of 500 tons could be draught was able to sail within a short distance from Washington street, has now become not only a shallow distorted water way, but an eye sore and a source of grave danger to health. It is a danger to the danger to health we would like to call your attention to the following facts:

It has long been a universally acknowledged fact that dampness on or near the surface of the ground has an injurious effect upon the health of those living nearby. In addition to rheumatism, neuralgia and diseases of the respiratory tract, typhoid, diphtheria and malaria stand out most prominently. Now, but a single glance at this unsanitary locality, is enough to satisfy the most arbitrary person that we have here a most beautiful habitat for these germs. Surely no person can be expected to overcome them. He concluded by giving Mr. Hunt a few friendly words of advice.

Mr. Elmer C. Butler of Quincy gave the "Right Hand of Fellowship." He welcomed Mr. Hunt heartily, and extended his congratulations, encouragement and advice.

Mr. Frederick H. Bishop extended the parish's greetings to their new pastor, and in a few well chosen words he welcomed Mr. Hunt in their behalf, to the church, their homes, and their hearts.

Rev. Frank W. Pratt of Hopedale, the second pastor, spoke to the people, and tried to impress upon them the fact that the minister can not do his work without the hearty co-operation of the people, and he felt from his five years' experience at Wollaston, that this would be given him.

The communication of the Board of Health to the City Council relative to the nuisance at the Quincy Canal is of interest because they have carefully considered the matter, suggested an abatement, and give figures as to the cost. It is given in full:

Poetry.
Cover My Defenseless Head.
SOLON L. GOODE.
A soldier stood on guard one night
With his head bent low in tears,
His vision was of those he loved,
Whom he had not seen for years.
Virginia's oaks loomed high above
O'er the silent path he trod,
And once the morning's battle near Thus he prays in song to God:
O, "cover my defenseless head
With the shadow of Thy wing."
A hymn of dear departed days,
Which at home he used to sing.
The moon spilled forth from fleecy clouds
As she heard these low notes ring:
O, "cover my defenseless head
With the shadow of Thy wing."
Deep hidden in the tangled wood
Stood a soldier clad in gray,
His gun was slung to his side,
When he heard the "blue coat" pray.
He listened till he caught the words,
Then his heart beat quick and fast,
He too had sung this same old hymn
In the lonely days of war.
The clouds swept by and stars shone out
As the "gray coat" dropped his gun,
And both men stood in silence there
Till the rising of the sun.
The angels must have joined the song
As God covered with his wing
The man who stood on guard that night
And the one who heard him sing.

Miscellany.
Incident of Civil War.
In 1865 a Potomac river steamer
was carrying a party of excursionists.
Among the passengers was a man who surrounded by a party of friends on one side of the steamer, was singing a hymn. When he had concluded he was approached by a man who had been attacked by the enemy and who inquired of the singer if he had served in Virginia during the civil war. He replied that he had; that he was under Grant and was in Virginia at the time mentioned by the inquiring stranger.
"Then," said the stranger, "I heard you sing this hymn and I was convinced that you were a true soldier."
The man in the Southern army and on a certain night was instructed by my officer to shoot the Federal Sentinel stationed at a certain post, so that a night attack might be made. I crept up into the bushes within a few feet of the sentry who was pacing back and forth. I heard him singing in a low tone. My rifle was pointed at his heart, but my curiosity prompted me to listen and if possible catch his words. I paused and as he drew nearer I caught the words of our defenseless head with the shadow of thy wing. My rifle dropped by my side and I could not shoot, and your life was saved.
"Oh," said he, "I remember the night
well. I went out into the darkness feeling that this was my last night on earth. My mind finally reverted to the little old home church and I began humming in a low tone this hymn which was my favorite. I did not imagine that I sang loud enough for any one even a few rods away to hear me. I remember however, the quiet peace which came over me when I finished the hymn, but I never knew until this hour that my life had been saved by the prayer of my lips on that eventful night—Solon L. Goode.

A CLEAN BILL.
In the drawing-room of a house in Mayfair Violet Raymond, a pretty, thoughtful-looking girl of some twenty-two years, was sitting anxiously awaiting the arrival of an expected visitor.
Presently there was a tap at the door,
and a servant entered.
"Capt. Walter Greville, miss."
The girl rose as a tall, bronzed man of about thirty-five came into the room.
"I hope you will forgive me for asking you to call, Captain Greville," she said with a grave smile. "I heard you were back in London, and I felt that under the circumstances you would not think it a liberty. My aunt, Lady Shelley, has retired with a bad headache, and she would also be here to receive you."
"I am only too glad to be of any service," he responded as he sat down.
"In fact, if you had not written, I should have ventured to call."

BIG FIRE.

Smoke from the big fire below on Tuesday night damaged our stock. 200 Sample Parlor Sets, odd pieces and couches were slightly smoked. New samples must be placed on show. The old ones will be sold regardless of price. Sets which retail from $30 to $40 at $15-$20 to $60 sets at $25-$30 sets at $50, the same with couches and odd pieces. A number of Buffets, Dining Tables and Dressing Cases were also slightly marred. Only perfect samples can be on our floor, so everything must go at once. Remember this is a manufacturer's complete line of samples; they are the latest spring styles, and are marked way below the cost of production for immediate sale. It's the chance of a lifetime. Don't miss it.

Poetry.

Memorial Day.

JOHN W. RYAN.

Beyond the stripes, beyond the stars,
Beyond earth's blinding prison bars,
You dwell, my brother, far from me,
Still to sing on a troublous sea.

Yet not so far away my brother,
Your spirit eyes pervade me as I see
A man with hair as white as snow,
Who loved you, the long ago.

When we were boys and hope was high,
And cloudless was our summer sky;
And you are still young as then,
While I dwell withered among men.

And you are happy out of strife
Amid the peace of endless life;
No battle calls of woman's alarm
Can threaten you with worldly harm;

So if the music you hear today
Be still to you as it was to me,
Perhaps you'll say, "O dear mortal friends,
When this process is for you, send,
You'll come to me from gloom away,
To spend a glad Memorial Day."

Miscellany.

DEPARTED DAYS.

The village of Brokenstraw had two cemeteries. One lay to the east of the settlement, on the road to Birchville. It was surrounded by a neat, white picket fence, and looked a large, square gateway of quite imposing dimensions. It was laid out in severe squares and stiff paths and rigid triangles, and like many another country graveyard, was devoid of shade.

Every lot was well trimmed and carefully weeded. Many possessed rustic iron chairs and benches. Thrift and care were apparent on every hand. Brokenstraw was proud of the East cemetery, and always pointed it out to strangers with commendable vanity.

"That hasn't nothing," said Dea. Daget, the oracle of Brokenstraw; "that ain't nothin' that sets off a town as a well kept graveyard. That hain't nothin' that shows the enterprise up the place." So well, just look at the East cemetery as you walk the town's made of that, an' then compare it with that miserable, shiftless buryin' ground on the hill. Why, 'tain't nothin' more nor less than a pasture. It's a disgrace to the hill community."

The burying ground on the hill was west of the village. A wooded height rose abruptly from the town, and on its summit was the neglected graveyard. It was a lovely spot. Grand old pines and maples swayed above the few lonely graves. The mountain laurel and sweet briar perfumed the forest undergrowth, and the scarlet berries peeped through the moss in autumn. A winding path, thickly overhung with outstretching boughs, led up the hill and around its brow from which an extensive view of the valley below was obtainable. It was a lovely spot. The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, MAY 27, 1905.

Memorial Day.

The general orders of Paul Revere Post, 88, Grand Army of the Republic, for the observance of Memorial Day will be found in full in another column. Sunday morning the Post will assemble at headquarters at 8:30 to attend services at the Quincy Point cemetery. The Spanish War Veterans and Women's Relief Corps will accompany them. Monday details from the Post will take part in the public school exercises. Tuesday morning the Post will assemble at 7 o'clock when details will proceed to different cemeteries. At 10 and 10:30 services will be held at the West Quincy cemetery. The command will have headquarters at 2 P. M. for Mt. Wollaston over the usual line of march, holding services at 2:30.

Camp Boyd Memorial Day.

Camp Boyd, L. S. V., extends an invitation to all members of the city who enlisted during the Spanish war, to assist them on Memorial Day in honoring the dead. The camp will act as escort for Paul Revere Post, G. A. R., both in the morning and in the afternoon on Memorial Day, and will also attend services with them Sunday morning at the Quincy Point cemetery, when Rev. Leon H. Austin will deliver the memorial oration. Memorial day the camp will assemble at 7 A. M., when details will be sent to Mount Wollaston, and to the cemeteries at Weymouth and Milton.

At 8:15 the camp will start for West Quincy and at 2 P. M. for Mt. Wollaston. A dinner will be served at Hancock hall at 12:30 P. M.

Memorial Day in Schools.

After the annual custom Memorial day will be observed in all the public schools of the city on Monday. Paul Revere Post has made the following assignment of comrades to the various buildings, who will tell of their experiences, and the lessons of the Civil War: High school, Col. Charles H. Porter and Col. Charles C. Haggard at 9 A. M. Adams school, C. H. F. Stoddard at 10 A. M. Coddington, Dr. Henry C. Halliwell at 2 P. M. Cranich school, James Peice at 2 P. M. Gridley Bryant school, T. C. Ring at 2:30 P. M. John Hancock school, E. J. Lennan at 1:30 to 2:30 P. M. Lincoln school, Samuel D. De Forest at 2:30 to 3:30 P. M. Massachusetts Fields school, James F. Merrill at 10 A. M. Quincy school, Warren Dunbar at 1:30 P. M. Washington school, James Cleverly at 2:30 P. M. Willard school, Col. Charles H. Porter at 3 P. M. Wollaston school, Isaac M. Holt at 2:30 P. M.

Not Heavily Involved.

There is no occasion for alarm because two Quincy institutions appear in the list of creditors of the brokerage firm of Burnett, Cummings & Co. of Boston, who have filed a petition in bankruptcy. It would take more than that to shake the Quincy Savings bank and Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company. The claim of the Savings Bank is among the smallest, only $1,707.30, and the officials of the bank inform the Patriot that their loss will not be of that nature, as they have realized on collateral. The surplus of the bank is over $800,000, so that a loss of about $1,000 is really very small. While the claim of the Quincy Mutual Insurance Company is placed at $22,464.40, the officials of the company do not expect to lose over $5,000, as the company holds good collateral. The Quincy Mutual was never in a better financial condition than today. It has greatly improved its class of risk, and its surplus is large, and yearly increasing. The condition of Burnett, Cummings & Co. has been known for a year, so that their failure has been discounted. The Blue Hill National bank of Milton is a creditor for $2,121.34; the Hingham National bank for $1,398.41; the Union National bank of Weymouth for $10,120.50, and the three Savings banks of Weymouth for $7,542.42, $10,081.67 and $10,801.30. While there is a disposition to attribute the failure of Burnett, Cummings & Co. to small earnings of street railways built in thinly settled districts, the real cause is over-capitalization and all that goes with it.

State Tax.

The state tax this year has leaped up to $4,000,000 from $2,500,000 last year; the largest tax since 1887, for the entire civil war. It will fall quite heavily on many of the cities and towns in the state that are already burdened with heavy taxes. Quincy's state tax this year is $28,800; last year $18,000. Braintree this year $6,400; last year $4,000.

A Creditable Number.

The Weymouth Gazette presented its readers last week with an unusually fine number. It gave an excellent cut of the new Congregational church of East Weymouth, photographed by Quincy's artist, F. A. Skinner, with a full description of the church, and the dedicatory exercises of the same. Also, nice photos of the White church, burned Feb. 9, 1903, and the Unitarian church and other attractive views of buildings and persons. It is an issue that Editor Hawes can be proud of and one that will be kept for many years.

Soldiers' Bill Vetted.

Gov. Douglas has vetoed the Veterans' gratuity bill. Similar action by the professor Gov. Bates, is attributed to one of the principal reasons for his defeat at the polls. The $50,000 allegation of affection suit brought by Virgilio Miller, a student at the Harvard Dental school, against John W. Knibbs of Worcester, to whose daughter he eloped last June to Providence, R. I., and married, was taken from the jury by Judge Hitchcock at Cambridge on Thursday and a verdict ordered for the defendant. The claim of John B. Cotton, the Washington attorney, who has been contested by Attorney General Parker, was paid on Thursday. Mr. Cotton claimed, under his contract, ten percent for collecting from the United States $1,611,740.85 on account of disbursement made by Massachusetts for the defense of the Union in the civil war. His commission amounted to the handsome sum of $161,174.08.

Mrs. James H. Stetson entertained at luncheon Monday a party of friends from Weymouth. Another pleasant affair at this hospitable home was a large dinner last week to out-of-town guests.

Gen. Nelson A. Miles is expected back from Washington about the first of June and on Saturday June third is to be the guest of John Adams Chapter Junior Sons and Daughters of the Revolution in this city, when an informal reception will be given him.

The new law relating to drunks went into effect on Monday. This law, in brief, requires that persons convicted be informed that they have the right to appeal from the sentence of the court. Up to date none in the Quincy court have taken advantage of this provision.

The regular monthly meeting of the Junior Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. building Friday, May 19. The members are now looking forward to the last meeting of the year which will be held with Mabel E. Lovejoy, June 16, and a very enjoyable time is anticipated.

An item from Bangor, Maine, reports that the Hon. Russell Sears, former mayor of Quincy, Mass., Dr. Newton of Detroit, Clarence Burgin of Quincy and John R. Graham, president of the Bangor Railway & Electric Light Company, caught one day 30 good-sized fish, and on the following day the same gentlemen caught 70, including one 12-pound toad.

Services for Norwegian people who have recently come to the city were held Sunday afternoon at 4:30 at the Bethany congregation. The services were conducted by Rev. Ludwig J. Pedersen of the Norwegian Congregational church of Boston. One hundred or more were in attendance, and there was an orchestra accompaniment for the singing. Rev. E. N. Hardy, the pastor of the church, was in attendance. These services will be continued weekly as an increasing number of Norwegians are now employed at the shipyard.

Dr. C. W. Carey passes another milestone this week, and that the milestone should not pass unnoticed, a few of his friends gathered at his residence on Hancock street Monday evening.

The doctor was home on Wednesday evening, but a telephone call soon brought him home, and although considerably taken back at finding his office full of people who were not seeking his professional services, he quickly recovered and bade them make themselves at home. The quartette composed of Mr. P. Barrows, Mrs. Alice C. Sellick, Miss V. M. Carter and Mr. Charles H. Tower, sang three hymns: "There is a green hill far away," "We shall meet beyond the River," and "Nearer my God to Thee."

The funeral of Thomas F. Goffrey was held from his late residence, 18 Packard street, Sunday afternoon. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Tyler of West Quincy, assisted by Rev. Leon H. Austin, and were largely attended. Many of Mr. Goffrey's fellow workers were present. The casket was surrounded with beautiful floral pieces, including pillows, wreaths, baskets of flowers and many small bouquets. A quartette composed of Mr. P. Barrows, Mrs. Alice C. Sellick, Miss V. M. Carter and Mr. Charles H. Tower, sang three hymns: "There is a green hill far away," "We shall meet beyond the River," and "Nearer my God to Thee."

Charles John Anderson, who lives on the Brackett estate of Adams street, recently unearthed a curiosity. It is the head of an Indian hatchet, the stone being shaped something like a sledge hammer, and weighing about five pounds. It seems to be quite a neighborhood for Indian relics.

Following are the names of those who took the second city service examination for special policemen, and whose names have been placed on the eligible list: Henry W. Thorne, Joseph F. Goodhue, George F. Phillips, Daniel H. Doran, John P. Duffy, Henry F. Riley, Jeremiah Dimeson, Thomas F. Malone and Arthur J. Parker.

Mrs. Joseph C. Morse, president of the Little Blue Association, has extended a cordial invitation to the members to hold the June meeting, the last Thursday in the month, at her summer home at Rose Cliff, North Weymouth. It will be a reunion of present and former members and will be an all day meeting with box lunch and sewing bee as attractive features.

The committee on the testimonial to Miss Underwood have heard from a few since the reception, who say they did not know that it was contemplated to present a purse. Over $10 have been added to the fund since the eventful evening, and there is yet opportunity for others. It may be sent to Miss E. E. Dearborn, principal of the Coddington school.

General Secretary Gay of the Quincy Y. M. C. A., left on Friday for Niagara Falls to attend a conference of paid workers in the Association. The topic for general discussion will be "Constitutional efficiency as others see it." A strong corps of speakers from various parts of the country will give their views. These include Rev. W. J. Dawson of London, Dr. Carroll D. Wright, G. Stanley Hall and many others.

Bethany tent of King's Daughters had a sparkling one on Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Crane, Revere road, one of the requirements being that each "Daughter" should have a male escort. After a conversation contest the gentlemen tried their hands at military with belated payment, while the ladies made neckties. Then the gentlemen bought, at fancy prices, lunch baskets prepared by the ladies, and a tete-a-tete lunch closed the festivities. Several prizes were awarded.

The services of N. B. Farnald, the special justice of the peace, seem to be much in demand for the matrimonial knot. Wednesday evening two couples were at his residence at 90 Washington street at the same time to be united for better or worse. Unfortunately one couple had neglected to procure the necessary license, so that a postpone was necessary. Mr. Willis B. Tibbets and Miss Alice G. Bowles of Neponset, however, had the necessary credentials and the two soon became one. They gave a reception later at 389 Neponset avenue, Neponset.

WOLLASTON.

Miss Ethel P. Parker is to be one of the piano soloists at the recital given by Mrs. Dubeaux, at St. Albans hall, Thursday evening. Miss Parker has made rapid strides in music the past year under Mrs. Dubeaux's instruction.

One of the late June weddings will be that of Miss Helen Sibley of Wollaston and Mr. Frank Wright of Milton.

Mrs. and Mrs. Nelson Ferguson, nee Collett, who were married late in April, are receiving their friends at their pretty home on Safford street, Wollaston.

Mrs. Alma Fausse Smith was on Tuesday elected one of the directors of the National Alliance of Unitarian Women.

Frederick H. Bishop, of Wollaston, had the misfortune to fall Sunday breaking a muscle in one of his limbs. He was taken to the hospital.

The unusually high wind yesterday blew the dust about a great deal, especially on those streets that do not receive the benefit of street watering.

The Christian Endeavor society of Bethany church held an enjoyable social Thursday evening in the chapel. Games were played, and ice cream and cake were served.

A new law recently passed by the Legislature takes the granting of license for public halls, tent shows, etc., from the City Council and puts it in the hands of the Mayor.

Mrs. E. C. Bumpus, president of the Quincy Women's club, is planning a pleasant entertainment for early June in aid of the Visiting Nursing fund, in which she and the club are much interested.

President Roosevelt's secretary writes that it is doubtful if the president will accept the special invitation of Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution, to visit Quincy during his visit to Boston in June.

The Coddington school will have outdoor exercises in observance of Memorial day next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Written invitations have been issued. There will be music by the City Band, speaking, etc.

There have been but two days this year when the temperature at noon has been as high as today. On Sunday days was on the 6th and 7th of the present month making a total of three 80 degree days this far in 1905.

Present indications point to a busy session of the Council next Monday evening. Aside from a large number of committee reports, the matter of the High school enlargement will probably come up through a report from the Finance committee.

The average temperature at noon on Memorial day for the past nine years has been between 68 and 69 degrees. The highest it has been at noon on that day during these years was 82, which occurred in 1899 and 1900. The lowest was 49 degrees which was in 1901. Last year it was 72 degrees.

A horse attached to a carriage containing four men ran away on Coddington street Thursday afternoon, and before he was stopped he jumped the wall on the sea street side of Mt. Wollaston cemetery. The men were thrown out but not injured and the only damage to the team was a broken shaft.

Dr. Robert B. Porter has leased a house on Day street, North Easton, where he will practice his profession of medicine about the middle of June. Dr. Porter is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Porter, of Adams street. His engagement to Miss Kate Lincoln, of Wollaston, was announced last fall at the Holden-Whitaker wedding.

An alarm from Box 25 at 7:40 Thursday evening called the apparatus to the unoccupied blacksmith shop at the intersection of New Bedford street and Canal street. The alarm was unnecessary as the fire was a light. A chemical stream from H. & L. No. 1 was used. The apparatus from Quincy Point and Wollaston made remarkable quick runs.

The Knights of Malta held an enthusiastic convocation in Greenleaf hall on Thursday evening, the occasion being a visit from officers of the Greenleaf Commandery. A substantial donation to the paraphernalia fund by Dr. Middleton of Quincy was announced. The Red Cross degree team from Cambridge is expected to give an exemplification at the first meeting in July.

Three delegates from the Quincy Y. P. R. U., and two from the Wollaston Unitarian church, will be held in the vestry of the Unitarian church, Sunday evening at seven o'clock. The nominating committee will submit its list of officers for next year, to be voted upon, and a report of the meeting of the National Union will be made.

Poetry.

The Veteran.

EDWIN L. BABIN.

On the hero he proudly sits,
In his straight-backed wicker chair;
Buttons bright and coat well brushed,
Sleeves hatched and silver hair;
Listening with eager ear,
Peering out with kindling eye,
For the file and drum and flag
When "the boy" goes marching by.

A few years back, and he
In the ranks was keeping step;
Now it is his hand alone
Follows to the warning "hep";
Follows through the dusty streets,
Banners drooping overhead,
To the oak embowed slope,
To the bronze of the dead.
He can only wait and dream,
In his sun's declining light,
Of the muster rolls that marked
Other decorations days.
And down the sides of Time
He reviews, with calm cheer,
Camp and fray, song and cheer,
And that charge at Malvern Hill.
On the porch he proudly sits,
In his straight-backed wicker chair;
Thinking of the hours ago,
Hours when he was marching, too.
And his eye upon the floor
To the drum beats make reply:
"Thump" and "thump" and "thump,"
As "the boys" go marching by.

Notes and Comments.

—King Edward has set the fashion of shaking hands without removing the glove. There are still some, however, who may continue to handle without gloves.

—Wood, Putnam & Wood of Boston says: "Eastern Massachusetts has a greater purchasing power than any similar territory in America (excepting only New York City). More than three million people have comfortable homes within fifty miles of Boston. They have steam and electric traveling facilities, exceeding by three hundred miles of track even New York City. Their per capita earnings exceed the average of the people of the whole country by eighty per cent. One-twentieth of the wealth and over one-tenth of the population of the United States are within fifty miles of Boston. One-fifth of the English-speaking buyers of goods live in this territory, and one-fifth of the savings of the whole people of the country is on deposit in the banks of Massachusetts. Will it pay you to talk to these people through the local newspapers?"

—The action of Kentucky prohibiting railroads within her borders from using plush in the upholstery of their cars has certainly been a radical step, but probably one that travelers will applaud, for it is there anything that is more of a dirt and germ collector than the ordinary plush seats of the cars. It has not been discovered as yet. Leather is open to the objection of being hot, but nothing is cooler, cleaner or more comfortable than denim, all the singularly enough so far it is applied usually only to the second class coaches. —Old Colony Memorial

—It is still manifest that the President is steadfast in his purpose to stop the trusts. If he can, but a Port Arthur job with millions of dollars is up in defense. —Massillon News.

—Equal privileges for all railroads in the state would seem to be a just rule, and the bill before the legislature to give the Boston & Maine railroad the right to buy the railroads which will be placing that corporation on the same footing as the New York Central or the N. Y., N. H. & H. Organized as the Boston & Maine is, under a Massachusetts charter, it is at present handicapped from acquiring street railway property if it should desire to do so. Only real Massachusetts railway having its executive management in the state, and has never forgotten its interest in the prosperity of the commonwealth. Just at the present time, in view of the tremendous reaction taking place in electric railway and street car lines in the country, the movement on the part of the steam railways need not be viewed with any alarm. Under proper restrictions such a union would be of great benefit to many street railways that are now struggling along fighting tooth and nail to retain their position as their stockholders. Many of these lines are not able even to do this, and it is not difficult to believe that some of them never can be put upon a paying basis without some strong help, such as might be offered from a large railroad system to which they might serve as feeders. The acquisition of the Springfield trolley system by the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. is an indication of what may be expected in the future, and under proper state supervision neither the citizens of the state, or owners of other electric lines will be injured, but possibly all will be benefited. —Old Colony Memorial.

—A "rain-maker" has scored success in Southern California and secured a liberal reward.

—Mr. Paine, of New York, chairman of the House committee on ways and means, is confident that there will be no deficit next year, and that this year it will be about $20,000,000. He says that there are no plans and no understanding at present on the subject of tariff revision. On the face of it the deficit for this year, ending June 30 next, is to be $24,793,307, but it is believed that this will be very materially reduced. On the other hand, there are men in Washington connected with the treasury department who believe that the deficit this year will reach $30,000,000 and that there will be quite a large deficit next year. There is a rumor floating about Washington that the American Protective Tariff League has quietly commenced a campaign in favor of revising the tariff up to meet the expected deficits instead of down. The administration is in favor of reducing the tariff down instead of up, but the Protective Tariff League will fight the president on that proposition. —Whitman Times.

—Medford will celebrate her two hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary next month.

—A clergyman in Holyoke, Mass., has agitated in his pulpit the letting down the bars on Sunday amusements, and welcoming base ball, golf, bicycling, fishing, theatres and any and all wholesome sports. We don't know to what demonstration this advance thinker belongs, but if he is honest he certainly has a wonderful lot of courage to propose this from his pulpit. Most ministers, and laymen as well, can see this thing coming fast enough without openly countenancing it. To keep one-half the day sacred to its establishment is all the pastors of the country now hope for or expect, and to do that will be a continuous struggle. Sunday, to a great majority now is a holiday. To confine the amusements within reasonable bounds is all that can be expected. The future Sunday in New England, as elsewhere, is in the hands of a great body of non-church-goers. They will do with it as they please. —Milford Cabinet.

—The Kansas farmers advertise that they will want 50,000 men at harvest time. And there are probably that number of men, and more in the east that would be immeasurably better off if they would accept this opening for a permanent home in the west.

—Western and Eastern views of Sabbath observance are quite divergent. The convention of the National Editorial convention is to take place next month at Guthrie, Oklahoma. Among the diversions which the people of the territory were to provide for the entertainment of the visiting editors was a buffalo killing, barbecue, parade of some thousands of Indians, broncho riding, steer branding, etc., at the famous 101 ranch. This affair was originally billed for Saturday, but the local community now plans to hold it on Sunday. May 15th the New England Suburban association made a vigorous protest against this desecration of the Sabbath and intends to uphold the protest with decision as its delegates attend the convention at Oklahoma. —Spencer Leader.

—The Japanese officers in the field consider it a point of honor to avoid luxury. General Nogai was given a beautiful cloak at one time and sold it at once, turning over the money to the Red Cross. He said that he had one cloak, and that there were those in his army in need, so that he could not keep anything which was not an absolute necessity.

—To construct the perfect milking machine has been the ambition of many inventors. In the records of the Patent Office at Washington may be found hundreds of the attempts to solve the problem. These the efforts of practical thought and labor by men in nearly all the walks of life, but principally by farmers, dairymen, engineers, and scientists. Many of these inventions show great ingenuity and some are fairly practical notwithstanding the more or less slight defects that they exhibit. One of the great advantages of the milking machine is that it supplies an exceedingly important but missing link in the chain of the sanitary transmission of milk from the cow to the consumer. Unless the most rigorous conditions of cleanliness prevail, hand milking is a danger point in even the best of modern dairying processes. One of the latest of these machines has been invented by Loomis Burdell, of Little Falls, N. Y. It is claimed that in his invention, Mr. Burdell has succeeded in designing a machine that fulfills the conditions described above, and one that has overcome the defects that are found in nearly all of the machines hitherto constructed. Reputable investigators fully substantiate this statement. —Scientific American.

—Captain J. B. Aulin happened to be at Port Arthur at the outbreak of the war, and as he is an expert pilot he was detained there by the Russians. His wife in San Francisco did not hear from him for a year, so got a divorce, supposing that he had died. Not long ago he returned to San Francisco with $25,000 that he had earned by piloting ships through the mine fields. There was a remarriage at once.

—The State board of health have made a tour of the various dairy farms of the state, and their report is, to say the least, alarming; they found over 60 per cent of them in a condition which caused the board to order improvements, or cessation of business entirely. In six hundred typhoid had been or was present, in others evidence of tuberculosis was shown. In some of them the board was astounded at the evidence of filth and uncleanness exhibited. A general clearing up along the line is demanded, and it is to be hoped that the board will be a lasting one in the future. In no other way can disease and death be so quickly spread as from uncleanness in dairy farms and their surroundings, and that 60 per cent of them should be found in such condition is at least no source of honor or pride to the state or the owners of the farms.

—In Prince Edward Island a law was recently passed which puts a great weapon into the hands of the authorities. This law provides that it shall be the duty of the magistrate to examine on oath all drunken persons as to where they obtained the liquor, which caused, wholly or in part, their drunkenness, and that a person refusing to disclose shall be deemed guilty of contempt of court and thus be liable to imprisonment. No more potent method could be devised for ascertaining violations of the prohibitory law than this. Men do not like to tell where they purchased their liquor, but still less do they like to be imprisoned. —Barre Gazette.

—It is announced that on his next trip to the Arctic regions, which he will undertake this summer, Lieutenant Peary will take along a wireless telegraph outfit, by means of which he hopes to establish and maintain communication with New York and other points. His hopes in this direction are realized, and no reason is apparent why they should not be, the service cannot fail to be of the greatest value in promoting the success of the expedition. If such a means of communication had been possible in previous attempts to reach the north pole, many human lives might have been saved, and a vast amount of suffering and misery averted. The Electrical Review declares that "it would be an interesting climax of such an expedition if the first work done at the pole were to erect a wireless telegraph mast—we almost said make use of the pole itself for this purpose." —Milford Gazette.

—Be kind to the census enumerator when he calls. He has a disagreeable job at best. Do all you can to make it easier for him.

—One of the Chicago dailies makes a serious mistake in discussing Boston's experience with municipal ownership when it says that the municipal printing plant was allowed to run down. That is far from the truth. The city, in order to get into the printing business, bought a broken-down and bankrupt outfit for three times its actual value. Then, having paid cash for that kind of a plant, it proceeded to replace it with new presses, and ever since then it has maintained a creditable plant at a cost of from 100 to 500 percent more than the city printing cost under the old contract. That is the truth in an nutshell. —Practical Politician.

—The Schoolhouse Commissioners of Boston want the Common Council to appropriate $1,500,000 to build and improve the school houses of Boston.

—The Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames held an informal reception Saturday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock in the Dorothy Q. house.

—The reception was very largely attended and a pleasant afternoon was enjoyed in inspection of the house, and its ancient and historic furnishings.

—It was expected that Gov. Douglas would be present at the reception, but he was unable to come.

—A lunch was served during the afternoon.

—The house has been restored outside and in to its original plan, and has already quite a collection of old-time relics. Whatever new furniture has been necessary is modeled after old lines and styles. The dining room has a table and chairs contributed by the Hon. Charles C. Lodge and is of old-fashioned pattern and well solid and handsome. The kitchen is one of the most interesting places in the house, as it has all the old utensils used in spinning, carding and weaving and other home industries. Its immense fire-place has been put in order, and holds four or five logs six or more feet long. A flight of stairs leads from the kitchen to the secret chamber above, to which food was conveyed by a pulley running through a hidden closet.

—One of the bedrooms has been furnished by Mrs. Mary Butler Olney and Miss Jennie H. Olney, who resided so many years in this house. In this room there is a wonderful specimen of needlework in a counterpane weighing several pounds covered with cording and stitching. On the mantel in the room stands the tea-cup and saucer used for 40 years by Daniel Webster.

—In one of the bedrooms is a quaint, old-fashioned bed, with trundle bed attached, with bedding complete, and arranged in old-time fashion. Tutors' bedroom attracted a great deal of attention. It has analcove where he had a study, with a wooden door to shut it in through the door. From this room a steep flight of crooked stairs leads to the room below, which was Tutor Flynnt's study. This has an outside door of its own, so that the old scholar, wit and humorist could go in or out at will.

—Here, when he "fell," as his diary records, "into a hyponchondrial dream," he could mutter it out alone, and spare the other members of the family.

—Opening of the study is the old north parlor. On its walls is still the paper made in and sent from Paris to adorn the room for the wedding of Dorothy Q. and John Hancock. It is appropriate in design, being a representation of Venus and Cupid, in blue, with festoons of flowers in red. The coloring remains bright and clear.

—The guests about this old house are spacious and filled with romance. Here walked Edmund Quincy's five lovely daughters with their attendant swains. Here came John Adams, attracted by the "pert and sprightly Esther," but giving her willingly later to his friend, Jonathan Sewall, who married himself so happily with Abigail Smith.

—Here on the box hedge Dorothy Q. died her last and tendered her flower beds. Of the distinguished people who came here, there were Benjamin Franklin, Sir Henry Lyttelton, Lady Franklin, and many others. It is fitting that this old house and grounds should be set apart as a memorial of the eventful past, and the Colonial Dames of Massachusetts are deserving of all honor for their earnest and faithful accomplishment of this worthy task.

—There is a caretaker at the house all the time, and it is open to the public for a small fee.

WIT FRUIT FLAVOR
Eat Plenty of Ice Cream in Warm Weather.

PHYSICIANS RELY ON IT TO REFRESH AND NOURISH.

Nothing Better for Children in Moderation

IF ONLY NATURAL FLAVORING IS USED.

If there ever was any prejudice against ice cream in the minds of physicians it has entirely disappeared. The prejudice has been removed by the fact that ice cream is now made with the cream, palatable, cooling mixture such nutritious ingredients as eggs, sugar, cornstarch and cream, but against the harmful unwholesome flavoring extracts that imitated the natural fruits by means of chemicals.

None of these doubtful or harmful extracts need ever be used. Chies and cooking school teachers some time ago refused to have their labor spoiled by the addition of rank, strong, sickening "Fruit Flavors." For Fruit Flavors the Gold Medal issued in 1893 to "Fruit Flavors" Extracts. Also by the Boston Cooking School, and by the National Health Board, East, South and West, and the Public at large.

All grocery stores sell "Fruit Flavors" in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Weymouth, East Weymouth, South Weymouth, Atlantic and Norfolk Downs.

Reception to Miss Underwood.

An unusually pleasant occasion was the gathering at High School hall on May 19, to celebrate the remarkable and highly satisfactory record of Miss Julia E. Underwood, who has completed fifty years service as a public school teacher in Quincy, and all these years in one building—the Coddington.

There were present classmates of sixty years ago as well as former pupils for most of the years, since 1855 during which she has been teaching. It was a very happy occasion for teacher and pupils, it being for many the first reunion for several years. The regret of many was that they could not have Miss Underwood to themselves for an hour that they might talk over old times; there was so much to say.

Herbert W. Lull, of Newport, R. I., Superintendent of Quincy schools in 1882 to 1900, said he did not notice any solemnity. Perhaps Dr. Osler had never met Miss Underwood. Instead of chloroform for her bottle, could be found the words—"work, temperance and fun." They were the secret of her success. She was the friend of her pupils, and her record was an honor to the profession. She has had from 2500 to 3000 pupils, and I figure it she has received but $1 per pupil. Evidently she is not teaching for money but for love. Mr. Lull extended his congratulations and also his thanks for the help she had given him. She is now retiring that which she has won.

Upon Frank F. Prescott, a former pupil, devolved the pleasant duty of presenting a purse of gold raised among her former pupils and friends, considerable coming from out of town. He queried how it was that some of Mrs. Underwood's pupils appeared older than their teacher, but attributed it to the fact that the teacher had in 1875 discovered the elixir of life, and has since grown young. In honor to discover the recipe of the elixir, Mr. Prescott offered Miss Underwood over $200 in gold.

Thomas B. Pollard, president of the Quincy Teachers' Association, followed, and in complimentary terms and a review of some of Miss Underwood's achievements, also presented a gift to Quincy teachers past and present a purse of gold aggregating about $130.

Miss Underwood rose and bowed, and Miss Mary E. Dearborn, the principal of the Coddington school, responded for her in her pleasing and intimate way. She said Miss Underwood appreciated more than the gold the large gathering of her friends and the kind words in appreciation of her labors. She wished to thank all heartily.

Mayor Thompson said: This is a rare and exceptional occasion. Picture to ourselves fifty years ago, a young girl on the threshold of womanhood, with all the hopes and ambitions of youth, commencing her life work, dedicating her energies and talents to the best of her ability, to the education and up-building of the character of the children of our city. After all these years with their cares and trials, hopes and fears, she still remains with a disposition unspiced, a kind word and a smile smile for all.

This modest woman would refuse all recognition, believing she has only performed her duty, with no expectation of praise or encomium. But her pupils and friends of fifty years ago, and all the states of that long interval of time, were resolved that this opportunity should not be permitted to pass without doing her honor and homage as teacher, friend and comrade.

As representative of the city of Quincy, I bear to you Miss Underwood its warmest greetings and pronounce well done faithful servant, with the hope that the long and loyal years of your service may be continued, and that health, happiness and prosperity may be your portion for the future.

An opportunity was then offered to meet Miss Underwood, and there were many reminiscences to recall that it was after 10.30 before adjournment came.

Mrs. Carrie Torrey Coughlin of Wollaston adds an interesting incident to the fifty-year record of Miss Julia E. Underwood as a teacher in Quincy. It seems that Mrs. Torrey and Miss Underwood were both teachers in 1855 for the same position as teacher. Miss Torrey says the School Committee seemed to want Miss Underwood to have it from the start. Miss Underwood was 18 years old and Miss Torrey was 20 years old when they were both appointed Miss Underwood, however, says she was not young for Boston because she commenced to teach in Boston the same year. She retired however several years ago.

CARD OF THANKS.

I wish to take this opportunity to acknowledge my hearty thanks to the beautiful testimonial and reception given me on May 19 at High School hall. It was a pleasure to see so many present, past and present pupils, and acquaintance teachers, and others who so kindly remembered me on this golden anniversary, as a teacher in the public school of this city.

JULIA E. UNDERWOOD.

Anecdotes.

"When do you expect your friend to come out and eat that?" the sailor asked.

"Same time as your friend" came out to smell flowers you follow put," reported Li—Singapore Free Press.

Gordon—Did Crawley's widow succeed in getting a pension?

Wallace—Yes, easily enough.

Gordon—How?

Wallace—She proved that her husband died of smallpox caught from a Confederate soldier during a reunion of the "Blue and Gray." —Life.

Magistrate (to witness)—I understand that you overheard the quarrel between this defendant and his wife?

Witness—Yes, sir.

"Tell the court, if you can, what he seemed to be doing."

Teacher—Tommy, what is meant by "nutritious food?"

Tommy—Something to eat that ain't got no taste to it. —Indianapolis Journal.

"You've eaten all that is good for you, Willie," said his mother in a low tone. "You must not ask for anything more. Remember now that little boys should be seen, and not heard."

"I'll quit talking," replied Willie, in a hoarse whisper distinctly heard by the visitor, "but my silence means that I want some more of that pie." —Chicago Tribune.

Household Receipts.

Raspberry, Strawberry or Currant Syrup. Crush the fruit and add to every quart of it add one pint of water. Let this stand over night. Next morning express the juice, and to each pint add a pound and a half of sugar. Put over the fire, boil for twenty minutes, skimming often. When cold bottle and seal. This cannot be used as a cordial, but a teaspoonful of it added to a glass of iced water makes a refreshing drink, and it is of use in flavoring jellies, blanc manes, icings, etc.

Asparagus Salad. Take cold asparagus and cut off the hard parts, place in an even row in a platter, cover with a 1/2 y of cold, green peas, garnish with tiny leaves of lettuce, and use French or mayonnaise dressing.

Chicken Souffle. Make one cup of cream sauce and season with parsley chopped fine and a little onion juice. Stir into this one-half cup of chopped chicken and one-half cup of chopped mushrooms. When it is hot add the beaten yolks of two eggs. Cook one minute and put away to cool. When cool, stir in the whites of the eggs well beaten. Bake twenty minutes in a buttered dish.

Vanilla Cream. Put a pint of milk in a double boiler, and when it reaches the scalding point stir in two teaspoonfuls of arrowroot dissolved in a little cold milk. Boil ten minutes, stirring until it is perfectly smooth. Add one cup of sugar, a quart of cream, and a teaspoonful of vanilla; cool and freeze.

Hotch Potch Pie. In a deep pie-dish place a layer of shrimps, cold, cooked well, then a layer of boiled potatoes, sliced thin; next some slices of ham, followed by a layer of hard-boiled eggs, sliced, and so on, until the dish is full. Cover the top with potatoes, cut into rather small pieces. Pour a teaspoonful of stock into the pie, cover with a crust, with small openings in it to let steam and gas escape, and bake for three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven.

—However the plans of the Harvard men who commit acts of vandalism may appeal to the undergraduates, the students of the Phillips Brooks house and steal a bronze tablet that had been prepared for presentation to the Bishop Brooks once studied, the students of the Phillips Brooks house will be sure to be the humor of it. One of the burglars was caught in the act, and as he happens to be a senior, and a son of a wealthy family it will be interesting to note the outcome of the affair. Lynn Item.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

Boston Theatre. At the Boston Theatre, where "The Earl and the Girl" is running out its second triumphant week, the audience has been so much taken by the humor of it. One of the burglars was caught in the act, and as he happens to be a senior, and a son of a wealthy family it will be interesting to note the outcome of the affair. Lynn Item.

Castle Square Theatre. The management of the Castle Square Theatre make an interesting announcement regarding next week's act on this popular play-house. The famous war drama, "The Girl Left Behind Me," has been secured, and its revival after five years will undoubtedly be a welcome event to all who realize its value as a picture of the stirring events of its time of action. The play is the joint work of David Belasco and William F. Felt, its original production, a dozen or more years ago, gained it an immediate recognition as one of the most successful plays dealing with the civil war period. The scenes of the play afford many opportunities for striking realistic stage effects, which will be fully improved in its revival as they were in the performances given at the Castle Square Theatre five years ago. "The Girl Left Behind Me" is announced for only a single week, and at the Monday matinee the usual free distribution of boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1905.

Bridge Assessments.

It looks now as though the report of the special commission appointed to determine how should pay the expense of the building of the Quincy Point bridge, amounting to over one hundred thousand dollars, would soon be returned to court. The question will then come up to be determined by the Mayor and Council as to how the Quincy share will be provided for, whether by a loan or put into the tax levy for this year.

The original Commission, consisting of Henry P. Moulton, chairman, John J. Flaherty and E. H. Vaughan, held all the evidence and arguments last year. They were considering what the award should be when Mr. Moulton died. This brought the whole proceedings to a standstill, and it was not until the first of this year that Judge Prescott Keyes of Concord was appointed to take Mr. Moulton's place. By agreement of all the parties, it was decided not to have a rehearing but to have Judge Keyes take a view of the bridge, read the evidence and arguments of counsel, which had been taken by a stenographer, and then meet with the other two commissioners and determine the proportion which each city and town benefited should pay. Ex-City Solicitor Blackman had argued the case during his term of office and his successor, Mr. Thomas, representing the City of Quincy, told the Commission that he was content, so far as Quincy was concerned, to leave the case as it had been argued by Mr. Blackman.

The Commission gave a hearing a week ago Monday, to obtain figures as to the cost of maintenance of the bridge, and also to discuss the question of the fees of the Commission, and the expense of the hearings. The act provides that the expense of the hearings shall be borne by the same cities, and towns and quasi-public corporations as are found to be benefited, and are assessed for the cost of the bridge. The Commissioners notified to be present at the hearing on Monday, only those counsel who represented cities, and towns who were to pay the expenses. Counsel for the City of Quincy, the towns of Hurl, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate, together with counsel for the County of Norfolk, and the street railway company, were asked to be present. By implication, therefore, it will be these parties who will be assessed for the cost of the bridge. The proportion which each will pay, however, will not be learned until the report is returned to court.

High School Field Day.

The annual inter-class field day of the Quincy High School will be held today at the lower field at Merrymount park. There have been a large number of entries for the eleven events which include:

- 100 yards run.
 - 220 yards run.
 - 1 mile run.
 - 120 yards hurdle race; 10 hurdles, 2 ft. 6 in. high.
 - Running broad jump.
 - Running high jump.
 - Throwing the hammer, 12 pounds.
 - Putting the shot, 16 pounds.
 - Putting the base ball.
 - Class relay race.
- First places will count five points, second places three points and third places one point. This is a rivalry among the four classes to see which shall win the most points.
- A "Q" will be awarded to each winner and to each pupil breaking a record will be given a medal.
- It will be seen from the following that four records were made last year, and four in 1903, while that for running broad jump has stood since 1902. The 120 yards hurdle is a new event this year:

- 100 yards run, 1904, H. S. Saunders, 11.5 sec.
- 220 yards run, 1905, H. F. Miller, 24.5 sec.
- 1 mile run, 1903, H. F. Miller, 5 min. 12.5 sec.
- 120 yards hurdle, 1905.
- Running broad jump, 1902, Fallon, 18 ft. 11 1/2 in.
- Running high jump, 1904, C. A. Shortle, 5 ft. 1 3/4 in.
- Running hop, step and jump, 1903, W. C. Bennett, 41 ft. 4 in.
- Throwing the hammer, 1904, W. C. Bennett, 97 ft. 6 in.
- Putting the shot, 1903, H. F. Miller, 31 ft. 11 in.
- Throwing the base ball, 1904, W. C. Bennett, 275 ft.

Memorial Service.

The Massachusetts Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold a Memorial service for the late Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, Tuesday, June 6, at 12 noon, in the Temple, Boston. There will be short addresses by Rev. E. E. Hale, Mr. Blackwell, members of the organization and other noted speakers. Seats will be reserved for members of the W. C. T. U. until 11.35. The public is cordially invited.

—On Thursday, June 1st, in the presence of his cabinet, ambassadors, ministers and other diplomatic representatives of the nations of the world, President Roosevelt, was one of the thousands of white House, which opened the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland, Or., 2000 miles away. Previous to this he made a brief speech to the assembled guests in the event which the exposition commemorates and also the hope that the same spirit that united the people of this country would in time unite all the nations of the world. The key is made of gold and was first used by President Cleveland when he opened the Chicago fair. In 1898 it was used in sending the first message around the world.

—The attempt on the life of King Alfonso of Spain, made at Paris on Thursday morning, was one of the outbreaks of wild fanaticism abhorrent to every man of common sense. It was without reason or logic, a mere onslaught against royalty as a system. The Spanish monarch himself has done nothing to merit the hatred of the anarchists; he has merely taken up the duties into which he was born, yet sowing an ill-will would slay him for the fault of being the son of his father. This is the fifth attempt made on his life.

—We would call the attention of our citizens to the advertisement of Thomas F. Swan in our columns today. He carries the largest stock of fine and medium grades of wall papers of any concern in Boston; and his prices give good satisfaction.

Among the guests will be the State officers of the Daughters of the Revolution, and members of other Junior chapters with their directors.

Monday, June 5, the East Norfolk C. E. Union will hold its first meeting of the new year's work "For Christ and the Church" with the Randolph Baptist society at 7.45 P. M. The invitation given the union by this society at the last executive meeting was very cordial. Now it is for each society to go with as large a representation as possible. The form of the meeting will be a variation from that of the previous meetings, this one being a C. E. prayer meeting, with the topic "The Evangelist's Creed," Scripture, Acts 8: 20-40.

Foreign countries have been added to the list of voters in the Herald school contest for Miss Julia E. Underwood. One of her old pupils now in business in Paris discovered a few weeks ago a Boston Herald in the Place de l'Opera, Paris.

—We would call the attention of our citizens to the advertisement of Thomas F. Swan in our columns today. He carries the largest stock of fine and medium grades of wall papers of any concern in Boston; and his prices give good satisfaction.

—Frank A. Robbins' big circus exhibits in this city next Friday, at the corner of Washington and River streets,—the old circus ground. It is an immense affair, worthy the attendance of our people. No doubt crowded houses await its coming.

THE GROUND IS AWFUL DRY.

Quincy had a frost Friday morning. Wind Sunday came a week from next Sunday.

The Seventeenth of June will come on a Saturday.

The police have appeared out in their white helmets.

Field day sports of Quincy High school this morning at the Park.

A few took their first dip of the season in the briny deep on Sunday.

A little fire feels comfortable in the evening, even if it is the month of June.

The vegetable gardens are making slow progress because of the cool weather.

The boys of the Quincy High school will hold a field day today at Merrymount park.

The last building on the site of the new lock to be erected on Granite street is being razed.

Mrs. Joseph P. Berry of Hancock street is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Norman Harris at Natick, Mass.

The Grammar school league will finish its schedule next week Saturday, there being games June 3, 7 and 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Marsh of Irving place, are spending the month of June at the Crane cottage at Post Island.

Adams Academy will complete its base ball schedule next Wednesday, when Rev. High will visit Quincy.

The sun will rise at its earliest hour Thursday, but the afternoons will not reach their longest until June 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Morse of Goffe street are now at their summer residence at Rose Cliff, North Weymouth.

Group pictures of the graduating classes of different grammar schools are being taken, so they will be finished before graduation.

Mrs. William A. Hodges had an ill turn on Thursday, and is confined to the bed. She is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Wilson.

The places on the east side of Hancock street, where the paving had settled, are being fixed. The paving is being taken up and relaid.

The Quincy High base ball team will play at Waltham next Tuesday, and will be accompanied by Quincy next Friday with Roxbury High.

All outward and inward trains were delayed for an hour or more Thursday by the draw on Neponset bridge, which had been opened, getting out of place.

The police who did escort duty to the Grand Army on Tuesday included only the permanent men and all of the force with the exception of two men.

After this week the Thomas Crane Public library will close at six o'clock instead of eight; being closed evenings through the summer excepting Saturdays when it will close at nine o'clock.

The base ball games in the Granite City league scheduled for Saturday of this week have been postponed to a later date. The games next week Saturday will be at Atlantic and South Quincy.

Mrs. Edmund Cottle of Randolph entertains Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution at her home on Monday afternoon for the regular June meeting. On June twelfth the Chapter goes to Daisy farm, Dedham, to be the guests for the day of Mrs. Laura Wentworth Fowler.

George A. Wardwell, commander of Camp Boyl, who has been battalion sergeant major in the Fifth Regiment, M. V. M., received an appointment this week from Col. W. H. Oakes as battalion adjutant. It is a case where merit has been appreciated and he will receive the congratulations of many friends.

Bicycle thieves are about, and owners of wheels should be careful, how they have them about, especially at night, where George B. Dawson left his wheel in front of the Savings Bank building Thursday night. A little later when he went after it, he found that someone had taken it before him, and taken his wheel away.

Owing to the repairs on the birthplace of President John Adams, the reception to Gen. Miles by the Junior Sons and Daughters of the Revolution, will be given in Boston this afternoon instead of in Quincy. The reception will be at the rooms of the State Society, D. R., on Boylston street.

The marriage of Miss Sadie A. Morgan to 1st Lieut. Walter C. Morgan, 13th U. S. Infantry, U. S. Army, whose engagement was announced some time ago in these columns, will take place this evening of Wednesday, June 1, at the home of Miss Morgan's parents, No. 1339 Pearl street, Alameda, California. No invitations have been sent out, as it will be a private wedding, owing to the departure in the near future of Lieut. Jones for Manila, P. I.

At Vermont School.

The following article will undoubtedly be of interest to the graduates of the Vermont school, who are now in the city of interest of 1903. Miss Nan Carter, who was graduated from Woodward in that year and who is now teaching in the Pine Banks school, Westminister, Vt., celebrated Memorial day on Monday at her school. Over the arch on the outer entrance, was the word, "Welcome" in red, white and blue. The school room was decorated with bunting and flags, and red, white and blue columbine. The blackboards were banked in ferns, in just the same way as the girls at Woodward used to decorate the assembly hall for their graduations. There were songs by the different pupils. Mr. Henry Ellis, a Civil war veteran gave a very interesting address. The parents of the pupils and many of their friends attended the exercises.

—Governor William L. Douglas has determined absolutely not to take any part in the contest to find his successor. John F. Thayer, Charles S. Hamilton, Gen. Miles are all classed by him as personal friends, and that is why he has no inclination to make any invidious distinction.

With the advent of June the end of the Herald school contest may be said to be in sight. Only nine days more remain for the collection of coupons, and only 15 more for any activity by the contestants. June 11 gives the last coupon, and they must be in by Friday, June 10. Friends of Miss Underwood should not wait until the last day but forward their coupons today, to the Daily Ledger.

He was found guilty and was fined $50, and put under $300 bonds to keep the peace for three months. The court also gave Cantilli a lecture and charged him not to carry a revolver or knife in the future.

May Temperature.

The extremes of moon temperature in May were 85 and 48, compared with 87 and 49 in May 1904. The noon extremes in May for ten years have been 95 and 60. Compared with May 1904, the temperature of last month was as follows:

	In 1905.	In 1904.
80 or above,	5	8
70 to 80,	9	10
60 to 70,	1	8
50 to 60,	2	3
Below 50,	1	2

It will be seen that maximum temperature in the 60's was most common in May this year, while in May last year the 70's led. This year there were only 14 days with temperature above 70, whereas last year there were 18 days, and there were fewer 80 degree days this year than last year.

New England Prospering.

New England history, thrift and progress, commenced when the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth in 1620. They were industrious and unceasingly for the establishment of commercial centers and industrial markets; and the present flourishing manufacturing and commercial activity of the New England shows how well they succeeded. But New England prospered on the scene long before our progenitors and shaped the bays and shores; piled up the mountains and artistically laid out the lake and valley lands.

Long years ago were cleared away the forests, and the mountains, lakes and inland sections of the entire sea coast were all linked by the great steam railroad. Climatic conditions have not changed, nothing new, except the opportunity to get there, and what additional charms hotel men and landscape artists have added.

Summer is the vacation season, New England the vacation land, and the Boston & Maine Railroad the vacation road. You don't know New England unless you know her resorts; and the Boston & Maine General Passenger Department, Boston, has just published a beautiful book of 90 pages telling all about New England resorts, how to get there, where to stop and what it costs. Send your address, the book is free for the asking.

Boston Payroll.

The city of Boston now has on its payrolls upwards of 15,000 salaried employees, and its payroll drafts now exceed $125,000 a year.

The street department leads the list, with 3397 employees in the several divisions, and the school department is a close second with 2914, while the police department comes next with 1556 employees on its payroll. There are some peculiar designations in the several departments. In the bath department there are a number of plaintiffs, some of whom are paid $1 a day for their services, while others are paid $1.50 a day. There are also chauffeurs in the employ of the city, etc.

WOLLASTON.

Wollaston lodge of Masons is having a successful year with Henry G. Fay as Worshipful Master. There are five candidates for degrees at the next communication, including two city officials. Other applications are pending.

Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Webster and Mrs. Frank Burgess of Wollaston, returned May 26 from St. Louis, Mo., where they attended the Baptist convention.

"No event in Baptist history for many years is of greater significance and of more far reaching consequence than the formation of The General Convention of the Baptists of North America, at St. Louis, Mo., May 17, 1905." Rev. Dr. Thomas S. Barbour of Wollaston, was also present at the convention, and gave his report as foreign secretary of the executive board of foreign missions.

The prize for the best net score in the open handicap tournament of the Wollaston Golf club was won May 25 by C. E. Lockwood, the scratch man, had the best gross score, and was second in the net column.

E. C. Tarbell and R. L. Pratt had the best gross score and also the best net score in the open handicap tournament of the Wollaston Golf club on Saturday.

The new tennis court on Willow street, which belongs to a Neighborhood club, was ready for use Memorial day, and several sets were played by members during the day.

The annual business meeting of the Wollaston Y. P. R. U. was held in the Unitarian vestry Sunday evening. The reports of different officers and committees were read and the following officers elected for next year: President, E. W. Arnold; Vice President, Miss Marjorie Fay; Treasurer, Louis Weston; Secretary, Miss Evelyn Cummings; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Grace Bishop; Advisory Board, Miss Anna Simmons, E. A. Kollins, Mrs. E. W. Arnold, Vice President, Baker; Must committee, William Weston, Miss Ethel Parker and Miss Gertrude Jones.

Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Sadie B. Winger to Mr. Walter H. Cushing of Wollaston, formerly of Dorchester, on best notice.

Miss Mary B. Adams of Wollaston and Miss Margaret Curtis of Boston, both won in the fourth round for the ladies' golf championship at Cromer, England, on Wednesday.

R. E. Freeman had the best gross score, 80, in Class A at the members' handicap of the Wollaston Golf club on Memorial day, and the net prize went to J. A. Campbell. In Class B it was a tie between A. H. Latham and W. M. Payson for best gross score, and Mr. Payson for best net score.

The assessors are at work in Wards Five and Six. They will probably finish their outside labors this week.

The Merrymount went to Braintree Saturday and were defeated by the local men, 5 to 0.

June 1st marked the month for weddings in Wollaston.

Rev. Edward A. Chase will preach on Japan Sunday morning at the Wollaston Congregational church, being the first of two sermons.

The young ladies of Mrs. Bennett's Sunday school class of the Wollaston Unitarian Sunday school will give a social in the vestry this evening.

The Merrymount base ball team will play the New Dorchester at Merrymount Park this afternoon. This is a strong team, they have been matched against, and a close game is anticipated.

Bargain Herald to be Printed.

It is announced that a coupon good for five votes will soon be printed in some weekly Herald, and also a coupon good for ten votes in the Sunday Herald either June 4 or June 11. Friends of Miss Underwood should be alert and secure as many of these coupons as possible. Better still, if you are not already a Herald reader, place an order in advance for the Sunday Herald for the next two weeks, and help along the Quincy candidate. The chances of success are good if we get a large number of the "bargain coupons." If 1000 extra Sunday Herald are purchased it will mean 10,000 extra votes for Miss Underwood.

More Expresses for Quincy.

The different stations in Quincy, including West Quincy as well as those on the main line, will have better train service on and after Monday. New trains will be run and there will be more expresses as promised, as will be seen below.

On and after Monday next, June 11, trains now leaving Boston at 9.25 and 11.25 A. M. and making all stops to Braintree, will leave at 9.27 and 11.27 and run express to Atlantic.

Outward train now leaving Boston at 8.24 P. M. and making all stops will leave at 8.13 P. M., run express to Harrison Square, and be due at Quincy at 8.35 P. M.

Outward train leaving Boston at 10.27 P. M. will run express to Harrison Square and be due at Quincy at 10.30 and 10.31 P. M.

Inward train now leaving Quincy at 8.26 A. M. will leave at 8.31 A. M. and run express to Boston, arriving at 8.47 A. M., this being a train from Fall River via Middleboro, and will accommodate Brockton people traveling spend the day at Houghs Neck. This train also makes close connections at Middleboro with trains from Hyannis, Woods Hole, Fairhaven and way stations on the Cape between those points and Middleboro.

Train now leaving Quincy at 8.30 A. M. will leave at 8.35 A. M. and run express to Boston, arriving at 8.47 A. M., and be due in Boston at 8.41 A. M.

Train now leaving Quincy at 11.08 A. M., and making all the stops will leave at 11.13 A. M., and run express from Atlantic.

Inward train now leaving Quincy at 10.08 P. M. will leave at 10.01 P. M., arriving in Boston at 10.25 P. M.

Quincy's existing express trains to and from Boston stand without change.

The 9.16 and 11.16 trains from Boston to West Quincy and West Quincy are restored. The 11.16 A. M. train from West Quincy to Atlantic is restored.

The summer people at Plymouth are to be accommodated with a Saturday train leaving Boston at 1.15 P. M., making stops only at Whitman, Monponsett, Kingston and Seaside, and due at Plymouth at 2.15 P. M., making the run of 38 miles, including four stops, in just an hour.

Reduce Atlantic Bridge Grade.

The Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association appointed a committee at its meeting Tuesday evening to appear before the County Commissioners on Saturday at Probate Court room, when a hearing will be given on changing the grade for the rebuilding of the Hancock street bridge at Atlantic.

The granite quarries and manufacturers who team considerable granite to Boston, find the grade on the Quincy side of the bridge to be the heaviest between Quincy and Boston. With the proposed relocation of Sagamore street, they claim that the southerly approach to the bridge can be lengthened, and in present position the granite is at small cost, as there will be no land damages.

They claim the approach should be begun near the Hancock street church.

The granite manufacturers are not the only ones interested but the expressmen and local stores which team heavy loads over the road are desirous that the grade shall be reduced. Lighter travel would also appreciate an easier grade.

Hancock street was built before the railroad was established, and is the only one in the city which is not a grade and the railroad should not cause grades which are almost prohibitive. The work should be done at this time when the railroad is paying part of the cost.

Peace Between Russia & Japan.

Russia, through American diplomatic channels, has notified President Roosevelt, who in turn has notified the Japanese government, that she is willing to meet Japan, not pledged to discuss peace but to open a discussion to ascertain whether it is possible to agree upon terms of peace.

That is the momentous outcome of the negotiations that have been carried on by President Roosevelt over since the battle of the sea of Japan showed the utter impossibility of Russia being able to vanquish her opponent.

It is hoped in Washington that within 10 hours, or by Monday, official announcement may be made to the world that conflict has been established between the belligerents.

To Visit Quincy.

The New England Women's Press association some two hundred active members from paper from all the large towns and cities in New England have planned to hold their June outing in Quincy, on Wednesday the twenty-first. A visit will be paid the old First church and the presidents' tombs, the Dorothy H. house and the birthplaces of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams. The party will be taken for North Weymouth where a box luncheon and picnic will be enjoyed with Mrs. Marion McBride as hostess and the Abigail Smith Chapter Daughters of the Revolution assisting her. Quincy members of the Press association, Mrs. Frederick H. Bishop of Wollaston and Miss Annie L. Prescott of Quincy will do the honors in showing the guests about the city. It is an opportunity for many pleasant newspaper write-ups about historic Quincy.

Summer Outing.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Mass. Press Association held this week, it was decided that the association hold its annual outing this summer at Nantucket. If proper arrangements can be made. The members and their ladies will be invited to leave Boston on Saturday, June 24, for four days' rest and recreation. Nantucket is an attractive place in hot weather, and the hotel and railroads hold out inducements to the editors to go to this summer resort before the rush of tourists, and undoubtedly a large and pleasant party will improve this chance.

Floral Sunday.

The order of exercises for Floral Sunday at the First church Sunday morning will include a baptismal service when four children will be baptized, also a memorial service for James Francis Harlow, who died June 26, 1904.

The address of the day will be by Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson, a former pastor, and parts will be taken by the kindergarten and other classes by the school and individuals.

The estate of the late William A. Hodges on Hancock street, corner of Revere road, was sold yesterday at auction for $6,000.

City Briefs.

It is time for the city to get up in arms over the High school question. Children's day will be observed at Bethany Congregational church on Sunday.

L. C. Hewson, wife and daughter, of Newcomb place, left last week for a few weeks' rest at Nova Scotia.

Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, attended high communion in a body at St. John's church on Sunday.

William W. Thomas, who has been on the Pacific coast for the past twenty years has returned to Quincy.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Burgin were entertained on Sunday by Dr. A. E. Angier at "Oak Knoll," Marion.

The base ball friends of the Granite City club are arranging for another game on the morning of June 17.

Mrs. Annie B. Arnold of Elm street is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Curtis at Marshfield.

Another Council meeting next Monday evening. For the past two months the meetings have averaged one a week.

Hon. John Shaw was registered at the Elbitt house, the army and navy headquarters at Washington, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Talbot and W. G. Comey of Greenleaf street, left Tuesday for a month's visit at Addison, Maine.

Goffe street now that it has been put in good shape needs frequent visits from the watering cart to continue the good work.

Miss M. Lillie Taber of Quincy avenue has returned from a pleasant visit with relatives and friends at Newport, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Burgess of Whitney road went to their summer residence at Rose Cliff, North Weymouth, this week.

Albert Keating of Washington street, who has been seriously ill the past few weeks, is slowly improving, and is able to walk out.

Miss Nellie O'Dowd severed her connection as bookkeeper for Julius Johnson on Saturday and has accepted a position in Boston.

It is the housekeepers and the storemen who appreciate to the fullest the street watering. It keeps lots of dust out of house and store.

One of the census enumerators found six different nationalities in one house, so some idea of the difficult work of taking the census are apparent.

Miss Mary Webb Dinegan, daughter of John H. Dinegan of School street, will be one of the 28 to graduate from the Yassar college with high honors.

At the annual election of the Ancient on Monday, Henry L. Kincade of this city, a member of the Governor's staff, was elected third sergeant of infantry.

The Woodward Institute is proud of the fact that one of its graduates, Miss Mary Dinegan, '01, will graduate with honors from Yassar college this month.

The graduating exercises of the Quincy grammar schools will take place Friday afternoon, June 23, and of the Quincy High school Wednesday evening, June 28.

The Sunday school of the First Parish will observe Floral Sunday on June 11, at 10.30 A. M. Rev. D. Wilson, a former pastor of the church will address the school.

E. W. Branch, who has resumed private practice as a civil engineer, has acquired control of the plans and equipment of H. T. Whitman, and will have his office in the Adams building.

Henry Taylor who is shortly to leave for Grand Rapids, Mich., where he will make his home in the future, held an informal reception Sunday afternoon attended by a number of his friends.

The illustrated lecture of Rev. L. B. Tenney at Bethany church Sunday evening was a most interesting and instructive one. He took his audience on a cruise through the Mediterranean and to the Holy Land.

Arthur P. Johnson, a government witness in the Edgar Hayden liquor case of Braintree, which was heard before Judge Avery in the district court on Monday, was held for the grand jury in the sum of $200 for perjury.

It has been asked if there is anything that could be done to keep the clock on the Universal church up to time. It is generally four or five minutes behind hand. A few minutes ahead of time would better please the public.

A twenty-four inch force main is being laid between the sewer pumping station and the Metropolitan sewer on Greenleaf street. As soon as completed Quincy's sewage will be forced into this sewer instead of to Moon Island.

Several times petty thieving has been reported at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. Between Thursday night and Sunday morning a high priced glass dish and flowers which it contained, were stolen from the lot of James W. Pierce. It is surprising what some people will do.

The Herald reports that Mr. Henry Brooks Adams of Washington, who is an older brother of Mr. Brooks Adams of Quincy, with General Porter and others, took luncheon with Secretary Hay in Paris on Sunday.

Commissioner Burke intends to macadamize a section of City Square in front of the Hancock House block and in order not to interfere with traffic the work will be done during the night. Four or five lights are being placed near the section to be repaired so that it will be almost as light as day.

Among the expert autoists of the city who have explored all the territory around the city, is Fred W. Austin of Chestnut street, the superintendent of the Quincy Electric Light Company. Sunday, with guests, he visited most of the South Shore towns, including Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield. His sedan has an accident and when he does, he is master of the situation. He has a good machine.

Mrs. Mary Willis Hatch, who has been selected as visiting nurse, will enter upon the work in July. Mrs. Hatch is a graduate of the Quincy Hospital and one of the most popular nurses in the city, being of a particularly sympathetic temperament. The establishment of a visiting nurse in Quincy is the outcome of the formation of the Women's club, it being the first philanthropic work which they turned their attention.

While Mr. and Mrs. Charles Farnold of Roxbury, accompanied by his uncle N. B. Farnold and Miss Farnold were on their way to Houghs Neck, near Adams farm, on Sunday, the connecting road on their automobile broke, shaking up the occupants, but fortunately no one suffered serious injury. Through the kindness of a gentleman who came along at that time, a horse was procured, and the party was driven to the residence of N. B. Farnold.

Commissioner Burke intends to macadamize a section of City Square in front of the Hancock House block and in order not to interfere with traffic the work will be done during the night. Four or five lights are being placed near the section to be repaired so that it will be almost as light as day.

Among the expert autoists of the city who have explored all the territory around the city, is Fred W. Austin of Chestnut street, the superintendent of the Quincy Electric Light Company. Sunday, with guests, he visited most of the South Shore towns, including Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield. His sedan has an accident and when he does, he is master of the situation. He has a good machine.

Mrs. Mary Willis Hatch, who has been selected as visiting nurse, will enter upon the work in July. Mrs. Hatch is a graduate of the Quincy Hospital and one of the most popular nurses in the city, being of a particularly sympathetic temperament. The establishment of a visiting nurse in Quincy is the outcome of the formation of the Women's club, it being the first philanthropic work which they turned their attention.

While Mr. and Mrs. Charles Farnold of Roxbury, accompanied by his uncle N. B. Farnold and Miss Farnold were on their way to Houghs Neck, near Adams farm, on Sunday, the connecting road on their automobile broke, shaking up the occupants, but fortunately no one suffered serious injury. Through the kindness of a gentleman who came along at that time, a horse was procured, and the party was driven to the residence of N. B. Farnold.

Many Candidates.
 An important meeting of the Wollaston lodge, A. F. & A. M., was held Tuesday evening at Wollaston, when five well-known gentlemen became Master Masons. Two of these were city officials. There was a large attendance of Masons from Quincy, Milton, Boston and other lodges.

City Treasurer Henry G. Fay is worshipful master and the wardens are Sidney F. Copeland and Walter S. Pinkham. The work was well performed by the above and the regular officers of the lodge who were assisted by Worshipful Brother Joseph P. Prout of Rural lodge of Quincy, Past Worshipful Dexter E. Wadsworth of Malden lodge of Milton, Past Worshipful J. W. Hill of Faith lodge of Charlestown, and Past Worshipful J. H. Stanley of a Boston lodge.

The Wollaston Male quartette assisted in the work, and the lodge is fortunate in having as its chaplain the Rev. Edward A. Chase of the Wollaston Congregational church.

After the work, the lodge served a banquet, which included salads, ices, cake, cigars, etc.

Wollaston lodge is now making additions to its membership at nearly every communication, and is doing good work. Visiting brethren are appreciated the hospitality extended.

Bethany Secured Banner.
 Norfolk Union of Christian Endeavor held a well attended meeting on Monday evening with the Baptist society at Randolph, Quincy members making up the trip on special electric. The banner which has been in the possession of the United Presbyterian Society of Quincy, was captured by the Bethany Congregational society which had the best percentage of attendance.

There was a business meeting, also addressed by the pastor of the church, and the president of the union, singing and a good social time.

COOKS WELCOME FOSS'
 Pure Food Agitation Condemns Imitation Extracts.
 Turpentine Enters Largely Into Spurious Lemon Flavoring.
 Cooks Use Foss' Extracts With Confidence.

Only a few years ago it was very difficult for the most painstaking woman to be sure that she was using a natural flavoring extract. The demand for extracts at soda fountains and in ice cream especially tempted unscrupulous manufacturers to use substitutes and adulterations for quicker and larger profits.

The imitations became so crude and deleterious that many persons ate sparingly of all flavored desserts. It was proved that it was the impure flavoring that made pies, cakes and ice cream dingy with growth-upon growth as well as with children, and an urgent demand arose for a pure, reliable, natural fruit extract. A wide market was secured for such a wholesome flavoring and from the first appearance of Foss' Extracts, which are simply the fruits in concentrated, liquid form, hotel chefs, cooking school teachers and thousands of plain housewives quickly discerned the difference between the artificial extracts and began to stock their pantry shelves with nothing but Foss.

Families that have been using flavoring extracts that were clever imitations of the true fruit and wholesome extracts, the difference is apparent in the taste of the food. They found in addition to a daintier flavoring, improved to discern that it was the flavor of Foss that got the proper flavor and it did the old, delicious kind that it was so much more economical.

As an example of the superiority of Foss' over all other extracts, let us instance that of lemon flavor. The best of all extracts has the peculiar, natural odor of the vanilla bean, and the delicate delicious flavor that is unmistakable to those who have ever used the vanilla bean itself; but in the case of artificial and low grade vanilla extracts, made hastily from poor and moldy beans colored by bright sugar to deceive the housewife, a rank unpleasant flavor is had, which sets all the housewife's skill and good luck at naught.

In this matter of flavoring extracts, natural delicious ingredients are indicated by Mrs. Lincoln in her receipt for ice cream on page 364 of her Boston Cook Book, simply because it is fruit in liquid form and the best. The superiority of this modern flavoring over all old fashioned extracts is due in a measure to the extreme care that is taken in selecting the soundest, ripest and finest fruit, and the care in the process of extracting and preserving the natural flavor. The beans are taken out by a natural, slow process that carefully preserves both the aroma and flavor.

All grocers sell Foss' Pure Extracts in Quincy, Wollaston, Braintree, Weymouth, East Weymouth, South Weymouth, Atlantic and Norfolk, Duxbury.

To Randolph.
 Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, were guests Monday afternoon, of Randolph members, the hosts being Mrs. Edmund Cottle and the assistants, Mrs. Patience Bailey, Mrs. Frank Granger, Mrs. William Porter, Mrs. Henry A. Belcher and Mrs. Charles Belcher.

The trip was made by electric, about fifteen going from Quincy and several from Braintree. Being a warm day, the ride in the open cars was very enjoyable. A short business meeting was held, Mrs. Titus the regent, presiding, after which Mrs. Bailey chairman of the entertainment committee took charge introducing Mr. Edmund Brown of Brockton, who played most delightfully on the piano by himself.

Several selections during the afternoon, all of which were much enjoyed and heartily applauded.

Mrs. Granger, who represented the chapter at the recent annual meeting of the national society at Asheville, told of the trip, the business meetings and the pleasant social side of the meeting, especially the reception at Baltimore, the beautiful home of the Vanderbilts.

A pretty surprise was the recital of the "First Inaugural Ball," by one of the girls, which was much enjoyed.

At 10.30 the singing was continued by Mrs. Edmund Cottle in costume of ye olden times, the inaugural marches, etc., being played on the piano by Mrs. Cottle. It was very well done, and called forth the hearty applause of the hosts.

The high school of ices and cake, after which a hurried leave was taken as cars like time wait for no man.

It was one of the pleasantest afternoons of the year, and Randolph ladies were acknowledged to be the best of hosts.

Forrant-Campbell.
 At St. Mark's church in Ware on Wednesday morning Mr. Charles Forrant of Quincy, Mass., was married to Miss Campbell of Boston.

The bride was Miss Campbell, daughter of Miss Campbell of 18 Sherman street, were married by Rev. F. John Sheehan. The bride's gown was of dotted white swiss muslin with lace trimmings. She wore a veil and carried a prayerbook. Miss Josie Campbell, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a gown of white dimity.

Stephen Forrant of Beverly, brother of the groom, was best man. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride. The bride is one of the most popular young women of Quincy. Among many beautiful gifts she received was a golden oak dining room set from her relatives. After a short wedding trip the couple will take up their residence in Quincy.

Gen. Miles a Guest.
 Although a Quincy organization entertained Gen. Nelson A. Miles on Saturday, the distinguished distinguished army man did not come to Quincy. The date for the reception was arranged several weeks ago, little realizing that the repairs at the birthplace of President John Adams were to be made at that time. Rather than postpone the event, it was decided to hold the reception at the State rooms in Boston of the Daughters of the Revolution.

The reception was tendered by John Adams chapter, Junior Sons and Daughters of the Revolution of Quincy, of which Mrs. Alice M. Granger is president. There was a large attendance of members who had as guests the members of other chapters of Massachusetts and the State officers of the Daughters of the Revolution.

The rooms were prettily decorated with flags and flowers. In the receiving line were Mrs. Adeline F. Fitz, general junior director; Mrs. Alice M. Granger, state junior director; Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Miss Edith M. Littlefield, Miss Louise Monk, Carl Prescott, Miss Louise Burleigh, Miss Helen Lincoln and Ralph Merritt.

An attractive musical and literary program was given at the close of the reception. "America" and "Our Starry Flag," the junior song, were sung. A brief welcome was extended by Mrs. Alice M. Granger. Miss Edith M. Littlefield introduced Gen. Miles and Mrs. Adeline F. Fitz as the speakers of the afternoon.

Gen. Miles spoke of the Pilgrims and said their principles gave us our country, with all its possibilities. Many, he said, think the Pilgrims are dead, but they are not. They are still with us, and their principles are still the principles of the patriotic work as existed in the past, but such opportunities, he declared, are to be found in other directions than on the battlefield, for there never was a time when nobility of thought and purity of life were more appreciated than they are today.

He paid a tribute to Mary A. Livermore and to Julia Ward Howe, and in conclusion declared that this is a land where every man is a sovereign and every woman superior to a sovereign.

The high school of ices and cake, after which a hurried leave was taken as cars like time wait for no man.

Principals Resign.
 The Patriot has known for a few weeks that Quincy was to lose two of its best teachers. The resignation of Miss Mary E. Dearborn of the Coddington, and Mr. Charles E. Finch of the Wollaston and Massachusetts Fields schools have both resigned, much to the regret of the School Committee and the people of Quincy.

The School Committee was in hopes to induce Miss Dearborn to withdraw her resignation, but have thus far been unsuccessful, while Mr. Finch goes to Rochester, N. Y., to a better position.

Dearborn came to Quincy in September, 1876, a few months after the Centennial of the birth of George Washington. She was the first woman to be principal of the Coddington school, and she remained there for twenty years of service this month.

Poetry.

In June.

A dimpling silver sea of eye,
A curved arm of purple bliss,
A high, thin tint of pale blue sky,
A vale dew-drenched, misty white,
A silence where its deep blue light
To running after with mellow light.

A lake like a trail—a misty song,
A trembling in the grass below,
A lake like a trail—a misty song,
A trembling in the grass below,
A lake like a trail—a misty song,
A trembling in the grass below.

The Sun! and hands that grazing go
Up shadowed slopes of pasture green,
Rank after rank of martial corn,
A host of blossomed spires and groves,
Rich banners from the tent of dawn.

A cloud sail white—no idle breeze
That whippers across the leaves
And blossoms of the locust trees.

An upward place of merry eyes,
A look that lovers understand;
Soft questions, and as soft replies,
A world that fades in sweet eclipse,
The tender clasp of hand in hand,
The long, close meeting of the lips.

Notes and Comments.

—Quincy will naturally view with much interest the celebration of the two hundredth and seventy-fifth anniversary of our Greater Boston neighbor, the City of Medford, first settled in 1630. The exercises will occur June 14th and 15th, and will include a parade, a banquet, a water carnival, and a public meeting at which Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, D. D., will give an oration and Dr. William Everett will read a poem. The school children are to have a prominent part in the celebration.

—New York subway employees are troubled with a new disease, affecting the eyesight. Boston's subway is so crooked the vision does not have time to become distorted. —Natick Bulletin.

—Norfolk county is the only county in the United States, so far as we know, which has the unique distinction of being divided, geographically, into two distinct sections, between which lies parts of other counties. Brookline has elected to remain in Norfolk county, while all the territory about her has been absorbed by greater Boston, cutting off the Muddy Brook people from the rest of the county. Then over on the south shore is Cohasset, still a member of Norfolk county, although separated from it by the town of Hingham which belongs to Plymouth county. The history of the events which resulted in this splitting our county into three portions is very interesting, and well illustrates the proverbial New England independence of character. —Randolph Register.

—A Chicago woman has taken a $25 prize for the best article on "How to Train Children." She is a maiden lady.

—The taking of a spoon from a restaurant table or some article from a hotel for souvenir purposes is a milky type of petty larceny which has been more or less practiced by many who would indignantly resent a charge of theft in such cases, but the limit for this sort of business seems to have been reached down in New Jersey. A new county court house has just been completed at Elizabeth City, and already the souvenir hunters have not only carried off toilet articles such as combs, brushes, soap, towels, in fact about every movable thing in the building, but they have even gone so far as to take off door-knobs bearing the county seal from the bronze doors, and the silver plated fittings of the plumbing. Nor did the vandalism stop here. Initials were cut in the tops of the highly polished desk and table, and the beauty of the interior of the building practically ruined. Such desecration is really inconceivable in any civilized community, and the authorities must share the responsibility for it if the perpetrators are not brought to book and severely punished. Such lawlessness is a menace to the peace and safety of any community. —Milford Gazette.

—Boston's Westminster chambers case is now before the courts, and if the owners get the jury to sustain the award of $542,700 damages, with interest, given them by the auditor, the sum will be very much surprised. —Somerville Journal.

—Springfield possesses one of the most expensive high school buildings in Massachusetts in its Central High school. The structure cost over $400,000, and architecturally is a model both in its interior appointments and furnishings, and in its general lines as viewed from the outside. This building has a very costly assembly hall; in fact the hall is made the centre of the interior architecture, the rest of the building being seemingly built around this large and marvellously beautiful auditorium. In every detail of the Springfield building there appears to have been a very lavish expenditure of money. In Dorchester there is a high school building which was designed to accommodate 1100 pupils. The Dorchester structure is very large, and with the land and furnishings cost the city about $500,000. Here utility appears to have been the prevailing note in the working out of the interior. There is a vast general assembly hall, and an equally large gymnasium. Headmaster Lincoln of the D. H. S., whose ideas the architects largely followed, has secured, probably, more conveniences for his teachers and pupils, has given to each department of the school more of the practical, than is to be found in any other school building in the state. So rapid has been the increase in Dorchester's school population, that already the spacious building is overcrowded, and the pupils study and recite in all sorts of odds and ends of places never intended for such use. —Randolph Register.

—Carelessness in the distribution of handbills has caused a first-class nuisance that should be promptly abated.

—The state in memory of the late Senator Hicar proposed by the Worcester citizens is not receiving nearly the popular approval it deserves throughout the State. As the statue is designed to be contributed to by the people as a whole, it would seem that the project had almost fallen flat, so comparatively little advertising has been done. Truly a man of aid for the people was Senator Hicar, and the people doubtless would gladly be numbered among the principal givers to a memorial of the great man.—Boston Courier.

—The American Ice Company has now a supply of 2,000,000 tons of ice on the Hudson and 500,000 tons in the Maine district. The independent company has 1,000,000 tons packed away on the Hudson. These figures represent about the yearly crop for the supply of New York City.

—The Hyde Park Gazette says: After making a pleasant reference to the candidacy of Col. Bigney, the Attleboro Jeweller, for councillor in the district, Practical Politics toboggans into the Quincy neighborhood and has a lot of nice things to say about ex-mayor Charles M. Bryant for the position, and winds up with the positive assertion that the man from Quincy is the best candidate for the office. He has to test the gold that he counters in his travels. Mayor Bryant would certainly make a hustling candidate, but we are of the opinion that for the next few years he is going to keep clear of politics and devote his attention to business, and for a little diversion to his speed skating on the Island Lake, the latter prize winners in every poultry show.

—The sale of the well-known "Hotel Fenimore," at Houghs Neck, Quincy, just west of the Quincy Yacht Club, is reported. The lot contains about 175,000 square feet, running from Sea street to the beach. On the land is a three-story hotel building, the cost of which cost to build about $30,000, a block of stores, a pavilion used for clam bakes and dances, two or three cottages, stable, bath-house and bathhouse. It is the intention of the purchaser to immediately refit and refurnish the hotel building, and make it one of the most attractive of the many shore places near Boston. —Dedham Transcript.

—The W. C. T. U. is up in arms against the movement of the agricultural department to introduce the raising of the poppy plant and manufacture of opium in this country. The department thinks it will be a benefit to the industry to the farmers, but the W. C. T. U. looks beyond the interest of the farmers, and fears the damage to all which would accrue from the propagation of the plant and increase of the terrible drug, and they seem to have the best of the argument, the moral sense at least. —Athol Courier.

—The successful advertiser in every line of business has proved to his own satisfaction and that of everyone else concerned in his business, the immediate and permanent value of advertising in the newspapers, and that it is a throwing away of time and money to make his commodity known in any other way. The newspaper ad. places his business before the public as the flyer and the ordinary handbill cannot do—makes it a part of his constituent's daily reading, and gives him the life and value in the community that he can never obtain elsewhere.—Boston Courier.

—Governor Douglas has wisely concluded not to be a candidate again. We say wisely, because he has had the honor and the profit of being governor of Massachusetts, and the chance is small that he could be re-elected. His decision not to run again leaves him free to act as he sees fit on matters that come before him, without regard to political effect—which is a good thing for the people of the state. In fact, the advantages of having a governor so untrammelled are so manifest that his decision would be good for the state. He is the governor of Massachusetts for two years and can be re-elected. Then the governor could always afford to be independent, and he would be really the governor of all the people, not of a faction or of a party.—Somerville Journal.

—Mayor Weaver is doing the folk story of Philadelphia. Now and then an honest and courageous official comes to the surface and almost alone clubs the ghoulish grafters away from the public crib. And these men are the heroes that should be continued by the people in the administration of public affairs, irrespective of party affiliations. —Mansfield News.

—One need not be socialistic in his views to believe that government control of life insurance would be advantageous both for the policy holder and the government. The recent exposures of affairs in the Equitable show that the government could, if it would, furnish to the policy holder life insurance at a much lower cost than the companies do at present and still pay handsome salaries to those who through favor of the government might be put in charge of the business. Then again the government might borrow of itself from the immense reserve funds of the insurance department with economy to the national exchequer. Life insurance is now reckoned as a necessary by the man of moderate means and good common sense, yet some have decided to enter into it because of the fear that sometime the thing may go to smash and they will lose their deposits; the recent disturbances in Lincoln of the D. H. S., whose ideas the architects largely followed, has secured, probably, more conveniences for his teachers and pupils, has given to each department of the school more of the practical, than is to be found in any other school building in the state. So rapid has been the increase in Dorchester's school population, that already the spacious building is overcrowded, and the pupils study and recite in all sorts of odds and ends of places never intended for such use. —Randolph Register.

—The following, by Gov. Folk of Missouri, is in line with ex-President Cleveland's famous declaration that "a public office is a 'public trust.'—It is not always by taking money that an official may prostitute his trust. He gives him to be exercised for the public good for any other purpose. An official can embezzle public power as well as public money. One in public office has no more right to use official powers for personal ends than he would have to put his hands into the public treasury to pay a private debt."

Willowdale.

With the coming of spring, most of the indoor entertainments have ceased, hence the breezy play of country life given June 24 in the chapel of First Church, under the auspices of the Hospital Aid Association, was all the more enjoyable. About three hundred attended, and there would probably have been more but for the shower. The play was given by the Jonas Perkins School Association of East Braintree, which has given the play several times the past season and always with marked success. "Willowdale" is a comic drama and full of quaint homely country expressions and pictures. The first scene depicts a typical country post office with its store combination where everything can be bought from a silk gown to garden tools and groceries. The plot of the play begins in the opening act, with the usual villain trying to marry a girl whose lover he has caused to be looked upon as a thief. The girl's mother sides with the villain, while the villagers mostly side with the accused man and the girl.

The villain does some detective work, assisted by a few friends, and in the end when the villain is about to marry, the ceremony is stopped by the prospective bride announcing that she is already married to the man of her choice. Then it comes out that she is an adopted daughter and her own father, and recently died leaving her a fortune, the villain being the only one to know it, as he had made the will and was keeping it quiet until he secured the money by marriage.

Of course the villain was routed, and all parties forgave and reunited. One of the hits of the play was the singing by the church choir from old-fashioned hymn books. This brought down the house, and was enthusiastically applauded. The parts were well taken. Oleander, the help who laughed all the time; Tom Hackett, the choir leader; Simon Binner (Jo Spear), who had rather witty parts; Mrs. Bassett, who wanted her own way; Miss Hazen, slightly crazy; Rosetta Gales, flighty but true; Millie Bassett, with too many lovers; John Bassett, the postmaster; Tom Skelton, the accused villain; Joseph Godfrey, the villain; Clarence Dinsmore, the school teacher, and Rev. Mr. Prosser, the minister, sustained their parts well and were frequently applauded.

It was especially good, well staged and without a flaw from beginning to end. Baldwin's orchestra enlivened the waits and also came in for applause. Home-made candy found ready sale between the acts.

The audience is indebted to Mr. Joseph G. Spear for the opportunity of enjoying so pleasant an evening. The Hospital Aid Association deserves the proceeds of the play. It was neighborly and kind of Braintree people to assist in the good work being done by the Quincy Hospital.

The school was dressed in white and were: Grace Spear, Marguerite Davis, Muriel Rogers, and Carlena Walker.

Japanese Celebration.

Togo's recent naval victory was celebrated Saturday by the Japanese of Boston and vicinity on the spacious grounds of Dr. Harris Kennedy on Blue Hill avenue, Milton. The house and grounds were lavishly decorated with Japanese lanterns and at the foot of the hill was a little open air theatre where the speaking was held. Handsome young ladies served iced, ice cream, pickles, tea and other refreshments. The program of the afternoon was confined largely to speaking. The speaker was the Japanese minister, who presided at the exercises opened with the singing of "America." Then came a toast to the President of the United States which was responded to by Hon. John W. Weeks. After a Japanese song, "Kimigayo," Osborne Flowers spoke for "His Imperial Majesty, the Emperor of Japan," and Rev. Clay Macaulay, formerly of Washington, spoke of America and Japan. Then came E. M. Johnston of Harvard and three Japanese speakers, K. Matsuki, A. Shirahama and T. Suzuki. The list of sports included fancy race with candles, Gekken, meaning fencing, juggling, popular and operatic songs, sword dance, etc. The celebration closed with a lantern procession which was very impressive and picturesque.

A Brave Act.

To leave unnoticed the brave and heroic act witnessed by many on Hancock street, Quincy, June 1, would be doing wrong to the hero. I am a stranger in this vicinity and have seen brave acts performed, but never saw one more worthy of notice.

He with his father and workmen were returning from their land day's work, happy though tired, when some thoughtless boy fired off a pistol, which frightened the horse so that he started to run, kicking through the dashboard injuring Mr. Lavelle quite severely.

The son seated in the rear seat, quickly great presence of mind, acted quickly, forgetful of himself. He leaped over all of the great man, grabbed the horse by the head with unusual strength, for he is yet only a boy, and held on until he had him under control. By so doing saved many a life, and also the horse. But when praised for this great act, he said that nothing more that I ought to do. If one of our city police did this, he would receive an extra stripe.

All who witnessed the sight, will tell you the same story, and if it was not for some who knew the young man, they would have been unable to learn his name. W. K. Frothingham. Somerville, Mass.

The City Council.

The High school enlargement order did not come to a vote at Monday night's meeting of the City Council as only seventeen members answered to the roll call. The absent members were Councilmen Adams, Barry, Burgess, Chamberlin, Hyman and Sawyer.

A communication was received from the Board of Health setting forth the need of connecting the Adams school with the sewer. To Committee on Public Buildings.

A number of petitions for minor licenses were received and referred. Those for license to keep and sell fireworks were laid on the table until later in the evening when they were granted. The Committee on Licenses reported upon a number of applications for minor licenses.

Base Ball.

During the first half of the seventh innings of the game between Quincy High and Thayer Academy June 2, rain began to fall, and time was called. As the rain continued for half an hour play was not resumed, and the umpire gave the game to Quincy High by the score at the end of the sixth inning, which was: Quincy High, 5; Thayer Academy, 1.

The rain helped Thayer to score five runs in the seventh inning, with only two out before time was called, and Thayer's total was 6, but then Quincy High had not had its seventh inning. Under base ball rules Thayer cannot claim a victory, but Quincy High can.

South Quincy won her second game, by defeating the Boston Unions on Saturday on the Ward Three grounds by a score of 11 to 5.

The South Quincy batmen solved Foley's delivery in the third inning and hit him freely for six hits and scored five runs, and in the sixth touched him up for five more hits and scored four more runs. The features of the game was the pitching of Patterson, allowing only five hits; home runs by Jack Duffy and James Birnie; and the fielding of Tim Callahan of the visiting team.

Bases on balls—by Patterson, 1; by Foley, 6. Passed balls—by McIntyre, 1. Hit by pitched ball—Jones, 1. At bats—1. Umpire—Callahan. Time—1 hour, 45 minutes.

The Merrymounts won from the strong New Dorchester team at Merrymount Park on Saturday in one of the most interesting games of the season by the score of 9 to 8.

The visitors were the first to score. In the third inning they made four runs on three hits and three errors. They scored again in the seventh and in the ninth by clean hitting and daring base running they added three more.

The Merrymounts did not score until the fifth. Weston, the first man up got his base on balls. Taylor, next, sacrificed him to second, Donahoe beat out a bunt. Baker then drove the ball over the right fielder's head for a home run. Cole followed with a single, and scored on Osgood's out and an error.

Merrymount scored four more in the eighth. Atkins singled and was forced by Kolson. Weston singled, scoring Kolson, but Weston overran second and was thrown out. Taylor, Donahoe, Baker and Cole all hit safely, but Cole was out trying for second.

In the ninth inning the score tie, Osgood the first man up got a life on Benge's wild throw, and scored on Bennett's sharp drive to left.

Features of the game were the fielding of Osgood and Cole, and Baker's long hit.

CLASS RELAY RACE.
First by Class of '06.
Second by Class of '05.
Third by Class of '04.

The revised figures give the honors to the class of 1907 with 42 points. The class of 1906 won 24, while the class of 1907 won 32, while the class of 1908 did not win a point.

The class of 1907 was first in as many events as the class of 1905—four each—while the class of 1906 led in three events. The fact that the class of 1907 won points in every event without exception was what won the honors for them.

The class of 1905 won the 100 yard run, the 220 yard run, the 120 yard hurdle race, and in putting the shot. The class of 1907 won the 1 mile run, the running broad jump, throwing the hammer, and throwing the base ball.

The class of 1906 won the running broad jump, the running hop, step and jump, and the great relay race.

The class of 1905 won the highest individual honors, 21-24 points, while Jordan of 1906 was second with 16-14 points.

The judges were S. B. Southworth, L. E. French and W. B. Bennett; the time keepers, W. R. Parker and E. R. Hall; the starter, P. F. Parsons, and the scorer, H. C. Halliwell.

One record was broken. This was by Fallon '07 in the base ball throw. The record for this event was 275 feet, and was held by Bennett graduate of 1904. Fallon made a new record of 320 feet, 5 inches.

Another record broken was the 100 yard dash, by Gram. The record for this event was 11-5 seconds and was by Saunders a last years graduate. Gram reduced the record to 11 seconds and 4-5 seconds.

For individual honors Gram was high man with 21 points. Nichols scored with 16.

Household Receipts.

Veal Cutlets. Cover cutlets with boiling water, and allow them to stand for five minutes. Drain and dry. Dip them into beaten egg and bread crumbs. Beat the egg only enough to blend the yolk and white and add one tablespoonful of water to each egg. Sauté in dripping, using not enough fat to cover, but fry in oil on one side and then on the other. When the cutlets are dipped see that the egg covers them fully, as well as the bread crumbs, if the grease is hot enough the covering will adhere.

Fish Croquettes. Mix together one pint of cold diked fish and one pint of hot mashed potatoes and one tablespoonful of butter; mix this well; then add one-half cupful of milk, one well-beaten egg, one-third teaspoonful of pepper, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful chopped parsley. Mix again and put away to cool. When cold make into balls, roll in egg and crumbs, fry in deep hot fat.

'Neath an Umbrella.

ELLA M. THRESDILL.

A diamond falls in each drop bright,
They see no cloud, but sparkling light,
While birds are calling left and right
As they walk and talk 'neath an umbrella!
It may be April, perhaps May,
It seems, indeed, some fair June day,
While rain-drops tinkle and music play,
As they walk and talk 'neath an umbrella!
The roses never grew so fast,
With pink, they trust their life will last,
No flowers e'er so bright, in past,
As they walk and talk 'neath an umbrella!
Love's flowers are sweet, the gift in hand,
As rain-drops water the land,
Though it rains or, earth is rain-soaked span,
As they walk and talk 'neath an umbrella!

Miscellaneous.

When Greek Meets Greek.

John Walsh had red hair.

If his hair had been brown, this story
would probably never have been written.
He had, besides the hair, a pair of blue eyes and a quick temper. An Irish ancestor who had come to America brought with him a spade and a brogue, a keen wit, the red hair and the quick temper.
The spade and the brogue had disappeared; the temper and hair survived.
Sometimes they skipped a generation, and flashed out in the next keener than before.

John Walsh had been in the school building. There were three rooms in the building. The room in which John Walsh taught was called the High school room. The highest class in it was fitting for college; and the lowest—in which were Annie Day, and Dennis Quinn, and Edgar Belmont—was studying decimals. They were in the upper room only because the lower rooms had overflowed and floated them up to the front seats in the high school room. They sat there very much awed by their fate,
and thought that the flash of John Walsh's blue eyes overtopped them and landed on the big boys in the back seats.

The master's temper was no secret.
"As quick as John Walsh's temper" was a town proverb. It had been the same in the boy's in the man. As a pupil, he had made his way through the school flashing and fighting and excelling. There had never been such a scholar in Burlingtonville. The town was secretly proud of him; and when, on his return from college, he had applied for the position of teacher in the high school to help him carry on his law studies, they had welcomed him back.
The life of the school had quickened and broadened. He imparted enthusiasm and knowledge in the same breath.
Every pupil in the room became alert.
They loved the fiery, impetuous master,
and the fact that they stood a little in awe of him did not diminish zeal.

It was the last week of the spring term. John Walsh had been teaching in Burlingtonville two years. He was planning to go, at the end of the term, to study with the well-known firm of Marsh & Bakewell, of Boston. His old mother was comfortably provided for,
and there was money ahead to carry him through. The last weeks of the term promised to be balmy—indoors and out.

Three weeks before the end of the term a change had come. Word had been received from Marsh & Bakewell that there was doubt of their being able to receive a law student this year. They would write again in two weeks. Meanwhile they remained regretfully, etc.

The sky clouded in the Burlingtonville high school. Signs of a storm were on the horizon. The school took in sail and cautions glances at the blue eyes flashing and darting about the room. The front seats quaked and worked on decimals.

"There he goes!"
"Hurry up, Annie!"
"We'll be late!"
"Let's go 'round the island!"

The group broke into a noisy, joggling run. Books and slates and dinner pails bumped in swinging hands, and rattling breaths escaped. Hurrying feet rattled the loose boards of the bridge and thudded on the soft grass as they crossed the island.

Tommy Day was the last in the race.
He had a round face and fat legs, and his little brown trousers were too wide.
He lumbered along, holding fast to his sister's hand, and waiting now and then at the flying group. They gave no heed till the other bridge was reached.
There they paused, glancing at it a little doubtfully and nudging each other to go on.

Two signs were across it: "Danger."
"Not a Public Way."
It was a swinging bridge—two parallel cables with boards across and a stout rope for hand rail. It had been thrown across for the operatives of the mill on the island.

But the island was a handy cut when one was late and the last bell ringing.
"Go on, Will!" Sammy Talcott gave the boy in front a little push.

"Go on yourself!"
"Hurry up! We'll be late!"
The boy hesitated. Then, with a little run, his feet touched the bridge and he sped swiftly across. He swung lightly to the motion, and barely touched the hand rope swinging beside him.

With a whoop and a chase, they followed, big and little, speeding across one at a time, and landing with a flying leap.

"Come on, Annie!"
"Oh, leave him there!"
"He's a baby! Come on!"
Tommy plumped himself on the ground, his legs extended, and raised a loud wail to heaven.

The group across the river regarded him with eager disgust. "Come along!" "He'll come if you leave him!"—Hurry up!

She placed one foot on the bridge and glanced down at Tommy. Then she looked at the bridge. "Go away!"
The group waited. "I give this only for bravery. It is known as the Victoria Cross. No one can wear it who has not been very brave. It is a great honor to have it. I have here!"
—he glanced at the bright object in his hand. "I cross the I should like to give in the same way."

He paused. A flutter ran through the school.
"To-morrow," said the master, "I shall leave you. I may never live here again. But I should like to think that you do not forget me."

Some of the girls blinked very fast.
The boys looked out of the window.
"I should like to send every year
a cross like this!" he held it up—"to be given to someone who has shown special courage."

They gazed at it respectfully. Envious glances stole toward Willie Flint in the back row. He sat very straight, his eyes fixed on the master's face, a serene look on his own.

There was no doubt as to who would have it. Willie Flint's name had been in all the local papers. He had become a hero since the day he rushed out and stopped old Moss Backman's runaway horse. It had all been done in a minute—old Moss swaying drunkenly on the seat—a swift plunge at the horse, a turn toward the fence, a blocking of the wheel against the post, before the horse could plunge away—no boy would have done it. Willie had been very modest about it. But one or two of the other boys longed to pummel him as he had serenely at the master—after the drop of an eyelid toward the lapel of his coat.

The master looked at the cross thoughtfully, and then at the school.
He opened his lips. "I give this cross," he said slowly, "because of special bravery to—Annie Day."

The room stirred swiftly and shifted its gaze to a small girl in the front seat.
She sat with dazed countenance, blinking at the glittering cross. Her anxious little nose was upturned to it.

Dennis Quinn bent over and gave her a labored punch. "It's your'n," he whispered loudly.
The master smiled. "Bring her here,
Dennis," he said.

Dennis grinned. He reached out a hand and, taking her by the elbow, shoved her gently to the front of the room.
The master bent and pinned the cross
on the plaid shoulder, and she tipped back amid breathless silence. Then the school broke into cheers and clapping.

She looked up for a swift doubtful moment, and her head fell forward on her arms. She burst into tears. They ran down her face and fell on the cross, and took the starch out of her white apron.

Not until recess, when the older girls gathered about her in the yard, fingering the cross and admiring it, did she begin to understand what it was all about.

New Battleships.

Letter from the Capital.

Washington June 10, 1905.

Unquestionably the humane world will applaud the direct and forceful appeal which President Roosevelt has made in behalf of humanity and of mankind in general in his identical note to Russia and Japan begging them to agree to a meeting between plenipotentiaries for the purpose of bringing about
a termination of the "terrible and inevitable conflict now being waged."

The President's note filled with expressions of good will that it could hardly occasion offense to the most sensitive power and in view of the obvious well meaning which prevails the action which President Roosevelt has
made in behalf of humanity and of mankind in general in his identical note to Russia and Japan begging them to
agree to a meeting between plenipotenti-
aries for the purpose of bringing about
a termination of the "terrible and inevitable conflict now being waged."

It is generally assumed by the diplomats in Washington that the President, as a result of the close relations which,
through Ambassador Meyer in St.
Petersburg and Minister Takihira in Washington, he has established between the Czar on the one hand and the Miko on the other, and himself was assured in advance of the preparation of his note that its receipt would prove acceptable to both.

The feature of the note which at once strikes all diplomats who have read its terms is that it contains a fair warning to Russia that under no circumstances can Japan be expected to accept of negotiations participated in by European powers other than Russia as has been suggested. Profling by her experience after the Chinese war Japan would, of course, reject any such proposal and doubtless it was the purpose of the President to make clear that fact not only to Russia but to the entire European world. That he has done so is proven by the unanimous declarations of the European representatives in Washington that the most obvious feature of the note.

Secretary Taft has practically completed the investigation of the Loomis-Bown case and everything points to the exoneration of Secretary Loomis, while it is improbable that Mr. Bown will be able to retain his diplomatic office. Minister Russell has arrived in Washington from Bogota and has been examined by Secretary Taft. Mr. Bown being accorded the privilege of cross-examining the Minister. Mr. Bown has assured Secretary Taft that Minister Russell would certainly substantiate the charges against the Secretary but on the contrary his testimony would serve still further to exonerate Mr.
Loomis. Then Mr. Bown asked and Secretary Taft assented. The Minister also asked that he be sent to Caracas to gather up evidence in his country. His offer was refused to substantiate his charges thus far it is entirely unlikely that his request will receive favorable action.

Much gratification is expressed at the courtesy shown by France in connection with the removal of the remains of John Brown to his native country. The French government has designated a torpedo boat to transport the body from Paris to Havre where it will be met by Admiral Sigbee with a considerable squadron and escorted with full military honors to Annapolis, where it will be interred. There have been received so many requests from various cities that the body should lie in state in each that the Navy Department has determined to refuse them all and to bring the body directly up the Chesapeake to Annapolis.

There is considerable uneasiness manifested with regard to the charges of the Southern Cotton Planters' Association that information regarding the cotton estimates of the Department of Agriculture have been furnished to certain persons in Washington in advance of their regular publication. These charges implicate Jasper Wilson, son of,
and private Secretary to the Secretary of Agriculture and George K. Holmes, assistant chief of the Bureau of Statistics. It is not believed that young Wilson can have been actually guilty although he is recognized as being a young man of somewhat limited intelligence. It is certain, however, that the matter will be probed to the bottom and it may fare badly with the association preferring the charges if they are found to be groundless.

The President has bought a little farm of fifteen acres down in Virginia
a few hours' ride from Washington.
It is not the expectation of the Chief Executive to add to his income by the receipts from the Virginia property but to secure a place where he can slip away from Washington over Sunday and be free from the constant interruption and the round of ceremonial calls which rob him of all privacy in Washington.
His Order Day home is too far away
to make it available for brief respites
such as could be had on his new place.
The property has been purchased in Reading Quite Unnecessary.

During a tea the other day a kindly old doctor was regarding one of the young guests with evident alarm. Un-dressed by the doctor's glances, the young scholar rapidly demolished plate after plate of bread and butter and cake. At last the doctor could stand it no longer. Going up to the young rascal,
he said:
"My boy, have you ever read any book which would tell you what to eat, what to drink, and how to avoid it?"
"Lor' bless yer, sir," replied the young gentleman, with his mouth half full of plum cake, "I don't want no book. Why, I eats all I can, I drinks all I can, and I avoids burstin'!"—T. B.

Problem of the Big Boy.
Of course, you don't want your boy
to go astray, and if he early shows love of the companionship of other young people, I think you will have to adapt yourself to circumstances. The first thing to do is to find out who his friends are, and the best way to do this is to keep open house for them. Let him invite his friends to the house, one or two at a time, for supper, or for the evening; make it so pleasant for them that they will like to come. It will be a bother, I know; it will litter up the place and they make noise and work, etc., but it will pay. You can then study his friends and suggest any needing out that may seem necessary. When you know his friends let him have a party of his own.

Invite the boys and girls whom he associates with and let them have a pleasant evening in his own home. Have simple refreshments, a candy pull is always enjoyed and costs but a trifle.
You can serve nuts, apples, ginger or sugar cookies, grape juice, lemonade or coconut, and to save work for yourself, use wooden picnic plates and Japanese paper napkins. The young people will enjoy the informality of it, and the expense will be small compared with what it costs to have a boy go wrong.

If there is a Young Men's Christian Association in your town, try to have him join it. The gymnasium will be a splendid thing for him, and there are numberless other advantages connected with such an organization.

After the Collision.
"My brother bought an automobile
last week," said an angry man to the salesman who stepped forward to greet him, "and he says you told him if anything broke you would supply a new part?"
"Certainly," said the clerk. "What does he want?"
"He wants two deloid muscles, a couple of kneepans, one elbow, and about half a yard of cane," said the man, "and he wants 'em right away."

Boards Without His Wife.
Here is a case almost without a parallel: A man and a woman living in Oklahoma were married a number of years ago, and both are now past the fortieth mile post on life's highway.
Just about two years ago the couple,
who had lived together for years and had accumulated considerable property, decided to separate over some trivial matter. The woman sued for a divorce, and it was granted. In the division of the property which followed, the home in Denison came into the possession of the husband. Now, the wife took condition that she didn't want to move out of the home, and so she made a proposition to her divorced husband that he should rent the property to her. The husband agreed, on the condition that she rent her room in the house and allow him to board with her. The divorced wife agreed. The arrangement has proven satisfactory. She pays her former husband $12.50 a month rent.
He pays his former wife $15 for board and room, and they get along finely, so the neighbors say.—Healthy Home.

Telegraphy.
"Well, well!" exclaimed the sucker
to the boy that had just yanked him out of his element with a wire snare;
"it beats all how modern improvements are spreading!"
"Modern improvements?" inquired
the boy.
"To be sure," answered the captive fish, as he flopped his finny form to a more shady corner; "who'd ever thought, for instance, that telegraphy would ever be utilized in the sport of fishing?"

"Telegraphy in fishing?" echoed the boy with a look of ill-concealed delight; "what a splendid idea!"
"What are you talking about? What's telegraphy got to do with this sort of business, I'd like to know?"

"Everything, young fellow, facious-ly replied the scaly logician as he fanned himself with his gills; "how would I have known that you wanted me if you hadn't wired me?"

Trolley Trip.

Tuesday, June 13, a portion of the Old Colony Street Railway system was inspected by a party of newspaper men and the railroad officials. It was an ideal day for the long trip over sixty miles from Hyde Park through Milton, Randolph, Avon, Brockton, Abington, Norwell, Norwood, Duxbury, Nantasket beach to Nantuxet. Thence to Quincy via Hingham.

The party started from Hyde Park at 12.30 in the luxurious parlor car, under the guidance of General Superintendent George F. Selby, and Assistant Superintendent John T. Conway, and after passing along the beautifully shaded shore of the Neponset river with its many characteristic bends and turns, the party was taken to Mattapan and Milton, and between Chikata and Hancock Hills the great Blue Hills Reservation with its natural beauty, its wild and admirable landscape treatment has made it one of the finest public parks in the world. Here one may wander all day in the open or roam at will through the woods. The weather observatory and kite-flying station at the summit, are not from many miles distant.

The car continued to Randolph with its broad avenue, shaded by magnificent shade trees, passing on the right the home of Mary E. Wilkins, one of our clearest American writers. The merry party proceeded to Highland Park, the town of Avon. It is a beautiful pleasure resort maintained by the company and one of the best of its kind in the country. It is ornamented by walks, drives, flower beds, shrubbery, etc.

The regular summer season at the park will begin on Monday, June 20th, with the musical concert. The drive from "Paris," "London," and "Grand display of fireworks in the evening. The patrons at Highland Park will be well supplied with a combination of attractions of the highest order, for 10 weeks. Following the opening week, the company will present, "The Girl from Paris," "The Girl from London," "The Girl from New York," and "The Girl from the South." Musical comedy and vaudeville. Great improvements have been made in the grounds and various additional attractions will be added on the opening day such as roller skating, etc.; for the children who are to be the chief guests, the company will have a circular fountain, and in place of the electric fountain will be found a complete set of swan boats, which will paddle around to the music. The big cage contains some eighteen monkeys of all sizes and ages.

One of the officials speaking at the park on the trip, said: "The management intends to do everything in their power to bring Highland Park up to the highest standard, as a beautiful and attractive resort."

Leaving the park the excursionists passed many beautiful scenes, including the town of Brockton, from which they proceeded on to Abington. Passing shaded streets the car continued on to Rockland and passed Queen Anne's Corner, still pointed out as the vicinity in which three maiden sisters lived who remained loyal to the crown through the two wars, and since the year 1814 as their sovereign fifty years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Continuing through South Hingham with its beautiful broad avenue, 200 feet wide, shaded on both sides by giant elms, the party entered Hingham. This is one of the quaintest of South shore towns, and the proud possession of a meeting house erected in 1681 and said to be the oldest house of worship in the country. Then after a ride through the various attractions of Old Colony Woods, which are unequalled for sylvan scenery, with oaks, beeches, maples, and other trees blended in delightful proportions, and most delightful in the green of spring, the party was brought into the open with a charming and most unobtrusive view of the harbor and surrounding country.

After having spent the afternoon in strolling through the beautiful section of Massachusetts as outlined above, stopping here and there to point out some historic spot, or repeat some legend about the many quaint and ancient houses, the party was taken to the old set beach, catching glimpses here and there of the harbor. Dinner was served at Nantasket Point, which was enjoyed by all after their novel outing. Paragon Park and its attractions was visited in the evening, making a brilliant showing with its various attractions. Old Colony Park is a wealth of high grade amusements, for old and young, comprising the best of the standard features and novelties which find favor at similar pleasure resorts, but including many that are absolutely new and are being given for the first time. By night, the park is a wealth of high grade amusements, for old and young, comprising the best of the standard features and novelties which find favor at similar pleasure resorts, but including many that are absolutely new and are being given for the first time.

Quincy Mansion Graduation. The graduating exercises at the Quincy Mansion school Thursday afternoon were exceedingly interesting. Not only were the singing and essays above the average, but the whole atmosphere of culture and refinement was helpful and pleasant.

The crowning event of the day was the presence and address of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe. In the natural course of events opportunity to listen to this rare gifted woman will be less and less, and it is a deep sense of gratitude to her for the effort she made to be present. She spoke as usual wisely and wittily, taking the class motto "Now is the time for action," as her theme.

Not only were Mrs. Howe's words appreciated, but was pleasant to listen to graduating exercises where the graduates take part. The modern custom of relegating them to the part of mere figure-heads, is not always the best for the school or the students. The importance of the day is in danger, by this method of relegating them to the part of mere figure-heads, is not always the best for the school or the students.

Dr. Willard is a good deal of a naturalist, as well as a scholar. The grounds of the school are a witness to this, from the beautiful flower garden and lawns, to the handsome vegetable gardens, which are all under his personal supervision.

Inside the house and school buildings everything is homelike and artistic. Livermore hall where the graduating exercises were held, is particularly well adapted to the purpose. The late Mrs. Livermore's portrait, but a most remarkable likeness, looks entirely in keeping with the fine Greek copies there. Dr. and Mrs. Willard are realizing high and ideal standards.

The Fund Increased. It gives me great pleasure to announce that the balance of the $500, which Miss Underwood's friends decided to present to her as a testimonial has been contributed, and is now in her possession. Mary E. Dearborn.

Pastor Ordained.

Rev. Charles Henry Emmons, who received his degree this week, as bachelor of divinity, at Tufts college, was on Thursday evening ordained to the office of the Christian ministry at the First Universalist church in this city, where he has acceptably supplied the pulpit for a year. Only a brief notice was given and the weather was very unpropitious, but there was a large attendance. Roses and other June flowers were used for decorations.

The program was as follows: Invocation, Rev. Stanley Gates Spear; Hymn 3, Tune Gettysburg; Lesson from Holy Scriptures, Rev. Stanley Gates Spear; Solo, "The Lord is My Shepherd," S. Little; Sermon, Rev. Charles Conklin, D. D., Hymn 742, Tune, Mornington; Prayer and Act of Ordination, Rev. F. A. Dillingham, D. D.

Solo, "My God and Father," Marston Fellowship of the church and charge to the minister, Rev. Charles Conklin, D. D., Hymn 411, Tune, Woodland; Benediction, Rev. Charles H. Emmons.

Dr. Conklin took his text from Ephesians 4: 12—"The work of the ministry. It was an age for the specialist, said, and the work of a minister of a specialist. After four years of careful preparation the candidate presents himself for ordination to the office of the Christian ministry. It was not so hard as years ago to be a Universalist. Then the doctrine was mysterious and dark. Now there is more of unity. It was the Universalists who were striving to bring about the unity of man.

Dr. F. A. Dillingham offered prayer and was assisted by Dr. Conklin and Rev. G. Spear in the act of ordination, the candidate kneeling during the ceremony.

In the absence of Rev. Perry Bush D. D., of Chelsea, the fellowship of the church and charge to minister was by Dr. Conklin, a former pastor. He caused the candidate to subscribe to the articles of faith, and to promise to be governed by the convention and rules by which the Universalist churches are governed. He also admonished him to be faithful and careful, and to take the word of God as his guide.

The beautiful solos by Mr. Maxwell and Miss Richmond added much to the service. The hymns were sung by the congregation. Mrs. Florence Cutter presided at the organ.

After the service the newly ordained minister was congratulated, and there were also kind greetings for Rev. Dr. Conklin.

On Sunday, Rev. Charles H. Emmons will preach his farewell sermon as pastor of the Quincy church. It will also be Children's Sunday.

Both Mr. Dillingham, who is a pastor at Bridgport, Conn., and Mr. Bush, who is located at Chelsea, were given the degree of doctor of divinity on Wednesday of this week at Tufts college. Dr. Conklin, who preached the sermon was a recent pastor of the church, and is superintendent of Universalist churches in the State.

Mr. Emmons was born in Bridgport, Conn., Oct. 28, 1870. He attended the schools of that city, and secured what education the schools had to offer. At the age of 16 he entered into commercial life with two brothers, remaining with the business when it was sold to Mr. C. A. Campbell, with whom he was associated during four years.

During this time he became connected with the church of the Universalist, Rev. F. A. Dillingham, D. D., pastor, and was actively associated with all its departments until the fall of 1901 when he entered the Tufts College Theological School for a four years' course, to prepare for the Christian ministry. At the end of his sophomore year he took charge of the First Universalist church at West Derry, N. H., for the summer, returning to the college in the fall, to continue his studies.

At the end of his junior year, he was called to take charge of the Universalist church at Hartland, Four Corners, Vt., where he conducted service, and attended to pastoral duties, until it was time to return to college for his senior year, to complete his course of training.

Upon returning to college he was called to take charge of the Universalist church in Quincy, where he has been doing missionary work while finishing his theological course at Tufts college.

While at the college, he has been actively connected with the numerous organizations of that institution, and was leader of the Mandolin club during the season of 1903-04. Owing to the press of work, both church and college, he was obliged to sever his connections with the musical clubs during his senior year. Mr. Emmons was a member of the Class Day committee, and orator of his class. He received the degree of bachelor of divinity on commencement day, Tuesday, of this week.

The Atlantic Bridge.

Nothing has yet been done toward completing the building of the new bridge over the railroad track near the Atlantic depot.

Inquiry as to why work has not been resumed brings out the fact that they are waiting for the County Commissioners' decision, in regard to the change in the approach to the bridge from the south side made necessary by the change in the location of Sagamore street.

The County Commissioners have held two meetings since the public hearing held in Quincy, June 10.

From what can be learned it would appear that the County Commissioners are willing to report a favorable decision. It claimed, however, that they can not do so until they have been furnished with a detailed description of the changes desired giving meets, bounds and distances. They have a plan but that is not sufficient.

Just who is at fault in not forwarding these details is a question, although it is reported to be because the City Solicitor and counsel of the railroad and railway have been unable to arrange a joint meeting.
